Terrorists free hostages, leave

By The Associated Press

France flew three Arab terrorists out of Paris today after the gunmen made an attack on an Israeli jumbo jet at Orly Airport, fought a gun battle with police and held 10 persons hostage overnight in an airport restroom.

The French Boeing 707 carrying the terrorists requested permission to land in Lebanon, but authorities refused and closed Beirut airport. The plane then flew eastward and a source at the Beirut control tower said the pilot gave his new destination as Baghdad, Iraq.

The Israeli Boeing 747 was not damaged in the attack at Orly Airport on Sunday and the hostages were released unharmed early today. But 21 persons, including one of the terrorists, were reported injured in the 15-minute gunfight that preceded the attack. Eight were reported in serious condition.

In Beirut, Yasir Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization condemned the attack, and the PLO's representative in Paris, Ezzedine el Kada, said the gunmen would be punished if handed over to the PLO.

In London, gunmen in speeding cars opened fire on the ground-floor restaurants of two hotels, the Portman and the Carlton Towers, as a Jewish wedding and a dance given by a Jewish firm were under way elsewhere in the hotels. Seven persons were injured by flying glass, none seriously, police said.

A police source said anti-Jewish extremists were suspected.

King Faisal of Saudi Arabia flew home from Egypt after a one-week tour of Arab states bordering Israel. Airport crowds chanted "Hero of oil, hero of oil" as the 68-year-old monarch embraced President Anwar Sadat before departing.

They talked for several hours Sunday, and one subject discussed was an expected new attempt by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger to to negotiate another Israeli pullback in the Sinai Desert. It reportedly will be based on proposals made by Israeli Foreign Minister Yigal Allon when he visited Washington last week.

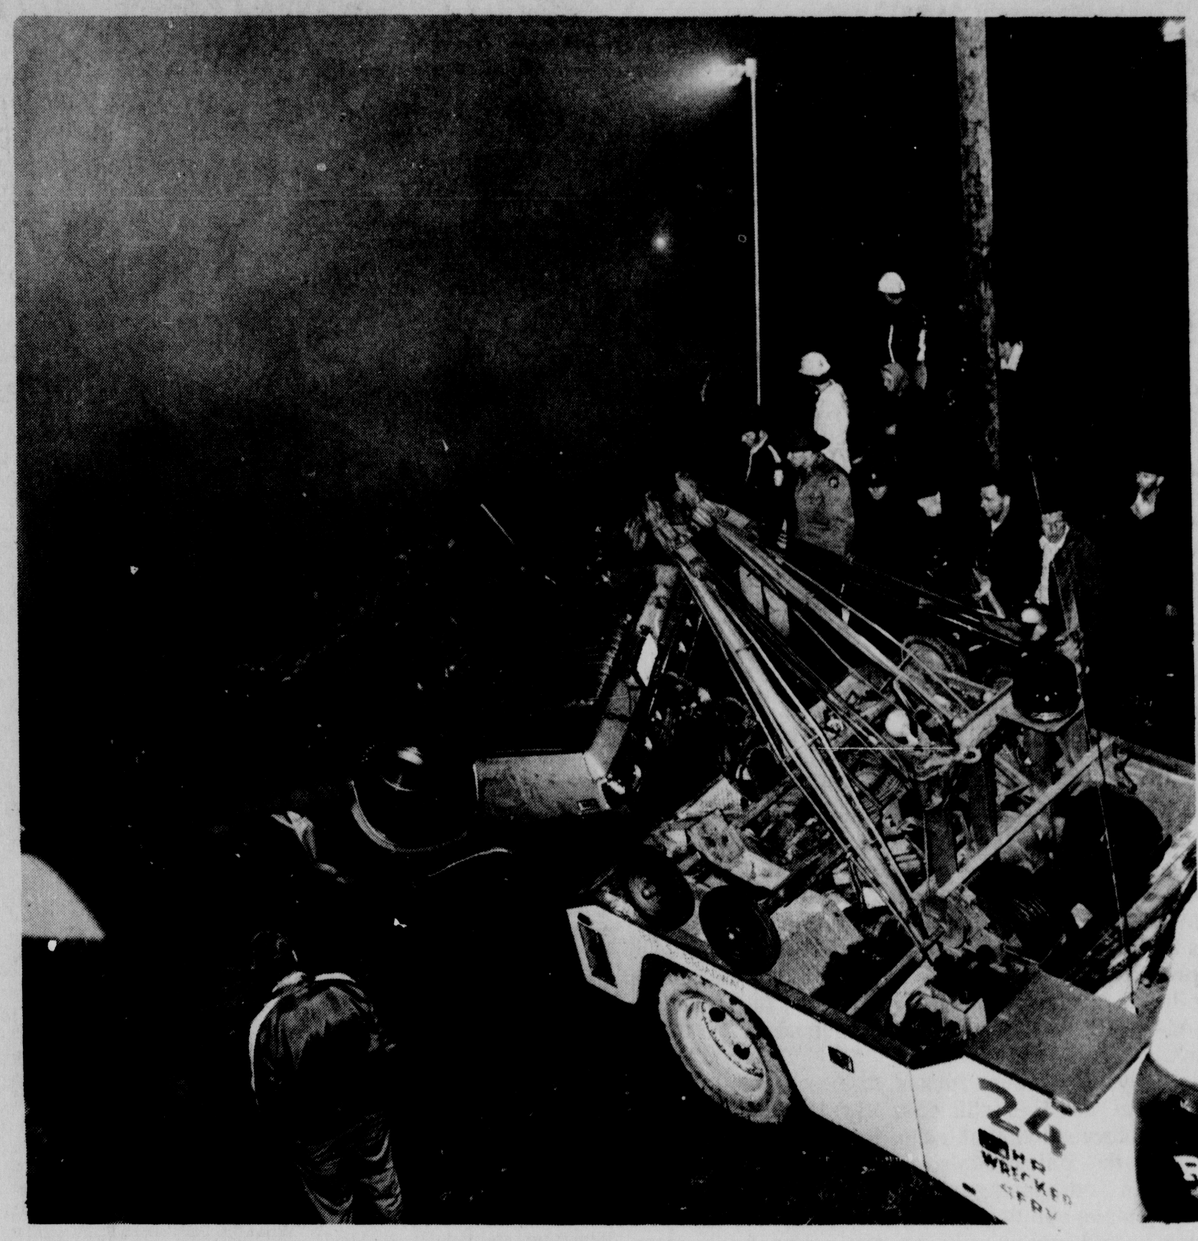
Saudi sources said they also discussed a summit meeting to be held in Riyadh, Saud's capital, by Egypt, Syria, Jordan and the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Other Middle East developments: A five-hour Red Cross cease-fire allowed 1,200 Lebanese villagers to return to Kfar Chouba, two miles north of the Israeli border, to salvage what belongings they could after a week of Israeli shelling. The village was reported a heap of rubble.

The Israeli government $7-t has inmted Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger to Jerusalem, indicating he might conduct a new round of shuttle diplomacy. It was not known if Kissinger had accepted.

According to the Lebanese newspaper An Nahar, diplomats in Baghdadsaid Iraq has signed its biggest arms agreement ever with the Soviet Union, but they gave no figures.

The same sources said France has agreed to supply Iraq all the tanks and other armored vehicles it needs.



Car pulled from river

Highway patrolmen and onlookers watch as the car in which a Malden woman was killed is pulled from the St. Francis River. The car had run through the Highway 60 bridge railing and plunged into the river at 1 a.m. Sunday at Fisk and landed in 12 to 15 feet of water. Killed was Virginia Clark, 55, of Malden Route One, whose body was recovered from the river at 8:30 a.m. Saturday. The driver, James Arnold Scoggins, 31, of Holcomb, and another passenger, Brenda House, 29, of Malden, escaped with minor injuries. (Daily Standard photo)

House begins 1st full work week

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP)—The Democratic-controlled Missouri Legislature begins consideration of a number of major bills as it opens its first full week of work today.

The bulk of the business before the General Assembly, expected to work through Thursday, will be handled in committees, which will open hearings on numeroua pieces of legislation.

The full House, however, is expected to consider a resolution from its accounts committee to modify the way representatives pay for their office operations.

That resolution, prompted by growing abuse of telephone credit cards would eliminate all piecemeal payments to legislators for various operations and give each representative $400 a month to cover all expenses. The new plan, to go into effect Feb. 1 if approved, would cost about $780,000 a year compared to about $720,000 spent for such purposes in 1974, but will give each member greater flexibility with part of some monthly allotments expected to go unspent.

Concerning committee work on bills, House Speaker Richard Rabbitt, D-St. Louis, has warned chairmen that while he wants all bills to be considered, the most important measures must be sent to the floor quickly.

Rabbitt has said he will either send unimportant bills back to committee or ask chairmen to resign if major pieces of legislation are not handled first.

The House Judiciary Committee will hold hearings on two death penalty bills, opening the third attempt of the legislature to approve a new death penalty law that would conform to guidelines of the 1972 U.S. Supreme Court ruling.

Although both houses have approved death penalty measures in the past, they have been unable to agree on exactly what crimes should be punished by mandatory death. That is the prime difference between the two measures up for consideration this week.

The committee will also consider a bill that would require witnesses to testify if they are granted immunity from prosecution, a proposal that has failed in the past.

The Senate Judiciary Committee will take up pay raise increases for the state's judges, a measure passed by the legislature last year but vetoed by Gov. Christopher S. Bond. Bond has given his support to a judicial pay boost, although not as large an increase as provided in the Senate measure, which would hike a Supreme Court judge's pay $8,500 to $40,000 a year.

A measure boosting unemployment compensation, viewed as necessary by many state and legislative leaders because of economic problems, will be reviewed by the Senate Labor and Management Committee.

Revision of the school foundation program, which provides state aid to school districts, comes before the Education Committee in the House. The measure, sponsored by committee Chairman Wayne Goode, D-Normandy, is aimed at equalizing the payments be-

Bad weather to alter alley trash collection

City Manager Charles Church announced today that if ice or snow makes alleys impassable, residents who normally have their trash collected in the alleys will have to place the trash at curbside for pickup.

He said the change will be necessary so city work crews may concentrate on keeping city streets open, without having to worry about the alleys, too.

Church said the city will notify residents by issuing radio announcements when the garbage trucks cannot negotiate the alleys because of weather.

People who, for some reason cannot carry their cans to the street, may leave the garbage in the back and the entire amount will be collected on the next collection day.

A number of city residents are still putting their trash in 55-gallon barrels and not in trash cans, Church said. The city has been lenient so far, he said, but is preparing to crack down.

Some cutbacks announced at Caproco plant

Declining orders have caused cutbacks in hours and personnel on some shifts at the Caproco Inc. plant, according to manager Scott Gamster.

He said some cutbacks and layoffs have been made on the second and third shifts, among employes making grass catcher bags for lawnmowers, because lawn mower manufacturers expect a sharp downturn in sales and have cut back orders.

Gamster said he did not expect any further layoffs.

He said he does not expect the downturn to be as sharp as expected and believes the manufacturers will be ordering more bags about the end of the first quarter of the year.

Two boys were seriously injured in a one-vehicle accident at 1:20 a.m. Saturday on Route KK 1.3 miles west of Route B near Friedheim.

The accident occurred when a northbound car driven by Jay Lee Burton, 16, of Fredericktown skidded through a marked intersection and overturned.

Burton and a passenger, Roger Lee Garland, 15, of Lutesville, were taken to Perry County Hospital in Perryville.

Jack Douglas Smith, 23 of Hayti received minor injuries in a one-vehicle accident at 8:10 p.m. Saturday four miles west of Portageville on Highway 162.

Federal program creates 30 jobs

MALDEN — Thirty new jobs have been created for the unemployed in the six-county area of Southeast Missouri under the new federally funded Public Jobs Program.

Phil Shelton of Malden, director of Bootheel Regional Planning Commission, said today that the jobs were awarded from the office of Missouri Gov. Christopher Bond last week, but were not announced until today.

Counties with the largest number of unemployed were given the highest number of jobs. The jobs were assigned through BRPC. Shelton said the jobs will be filled as soon as eligible personnel can be hired. To qualify, a person must have been unemployed for at least 30 days. The jobs will be awarded for only one year. Shelton said more job openings will be announced within the next three months.

The counties and the number of jobs they are allowed to create are:

New Madrid County, 15, including three by the County Court, three to the city of New Madrid, two to the city of Portageville, one to the city of Parma, three to North Lilbourn and two to the New Madrid R-1 School District.

Scott County, 3, including one each to the cities of Sikeston, Miner and Oran.

THE USE OF FORCE

The possibility that American military force might be used in the Middle East has been raised because Secretary of State Kissinger declined to rule it out under every conceivable circumstance. The circumstance under which it might be used, the Secretary suggested, would be "where there's some actual strangulation of the industrialized world." It would not be used, he said, in a dispute over price.

And yet Kissinger also said, "a reduction in energy prices is important. It must be achieved and we must organize ourselves to bring it about as rapidly as possible."

Left unstated, however, is what happens if none of the methods now being talked about to lower the price of oil actually produces results. There are many reputable observers who don't believe they will succeed. If not, then a political and economic disaster in many western nations is a distinct possibility.

Professor Robert Tucker of John Hopkins is one such doubter. Writing in the January issue of Commentary magazine, he argues that it is precisely the absence of the meaningful threat of force that is the missing link in the present oil crisis. Instead of leaving open the option of armed intervention, the American government has all but foreclosed it. He says that if it is true that armed intervention is not technically feasible, then we have ceased to be a great power, for it would be difficult to find a group of states with a weaker collective military capability.

As to the spectre of counter-intervention by the Soviets, the professor argues that the very heavy risk to the Soviets of military involvement is not justified by the stakes involved — for them. It is not the Soviet jugular that is under attack.

Basically, Professor Tucker argues throughout his article that the U.S. still does have the capability of military intervention, that the Soviets are not likely to risk war with the United States over the issue, that the destruction and sabotage of the oil fields would not be unmanageable, and that neither our allies nor U.S. public opinion would necessarily be as outraged as some imagine.

We don't know whether Dr. Kissinger has studied the professor's thesis, but even his statement that there could be some valid grounds for U.S. intervention may add a useful new dimension to what is obviously a grave international crisis. Military force should not be used except when vital interests are at stake, but it still remains the ultimate sanction in world affairs. If nations such as the Arab oil producers should conclude that they can act against us in any manner whatsoever with complete impunity, then we are surely finished as a great nation, and we can expect the consequences to follow in short order.

We're glad to see our Secretary of State show a little backbone. We'd like to see a lot more of it.

IS THE GAP CLOSING?

The so-called generation gap is much overrated.

So says Gisela Konopka, professor of social work at the university of Minnesota and director of the university's Center for Youth Development and Research.

The barriers that do exist between young and old are primarily artificial, she argues, and fear is the main reason for their existence.

There is fear of the unknown and fear of change, aided and abetted by the repetition of catch phrases like "generation gap," "breakdown of the family," "future shock" and "permissiveness."

Familes today may actually be moving toward closer relationships as they become more democratic, she thinks. Fast and easy transportation and communication allow physically separated families to get together often. Rather than destroying the family, increased mobility may be recreating the pattern of the neighborhood family.

The new family relationship is not "permissive" in the sense that one can always do what one wants. Rather, it means that adults must consciously share their value systems with the young and expect challenging and questioning. Young people in turn have to think through their value systems.

"We cannot always build agreement," says Prof. Konopka, "but we must try to build trust."

Such acts must be stopped and punished - whether they occur in Mississippi or in New York. Under our Constitution, the local authorities have the central responsibility for civil peace. There is no place in our Federal system for a national police force. But where help is needed or Federal law is violated, we shall be there. We will work together to punish all such lawbreakers, whether they be murderers in the countryside, or hooded nightriders on the highways, or hoodlums in the city.

ENERGY AND LIFE

There are so many ways in which electric energy sustains civilization and life as we know it that it is impossible to single out precisely where its utilization is most important. Even the most ardent antiergy advocate should find cause to ponder the wisdom of opposing new power plant construction without due regard for the consequences.

An advertisement of the Investor-Owned Electric Light and Power Companies, which appeared in a news magazine a short time ago, describes the role of electricity in a modern hospital. It uses a hospital in suburban Philadelphia as an example. It tells how "Hundreds of people in eastern Pennsylvania are living happy, healthy lives today because of electronic 'assistants' ... "working around the clock oin that hospital. Electricity powers heart-lung machines, artificial kidneys, resuscitators, incubators, spirometers and cardiac catheterization equipment. Electricity powers a new electron microscope, capable of a 60,000 magnification print of the nucleus of a virus-infected cell. Of course, electricity serves the hospital in the conventional way that everyone takes for granted -- lighting, cooking, cleaning, etc. Power failure at a hospital is catastrophic.

Multiply the Pennsylvania hospital and its dependence on electricity by hundreds and thousands and some conception of the importance of electricity to life can be grasped. We are now threatened with a power shortage, in large part, due to basic misunderstandings about electricity and the environment. These misunderstandings must be corrected. As the advertisement concludes, "To produce the power needed, new electric generating plants must be built now. They must be built for the most efficient performance and with the best safeguards for the environment we can design -- now. Meanwhile we must be searching for even better ways to generate electricity."

The country can no longer afford the stop-everything brand of environmentalism that has cut the energy margin perilously thin. Energy sources must be developed, and the developers must be permitted to earn the money that will attract the billions of investments dollars that are needed. Ther perpetuation of all things the American people value most highly -- freedom, health, high living standards, and a secure nation -- allow no other recourse.

FOOD STAMPS AND INFLATION

As politicians talk about curbing inflation and arresting the recession, it is interesting to note that the welfare establishment is doing its best to add to the U. S. budget deficit.

Around the country, according to Anthony Harrigan, wefwelfare administrators are trying to get more people to use food stamps. Spenders in Congress are bitterly opposing President Ford's proposal for even a small -- $325 million -- cutback in foodstamp spending.

Consider what is happening in North Carolina. Wayne Metz, directors of the Guilford County Social Services Department, recently stated that when he took charge of the department last July only 2,800 persons had been certified as eligible for food stamps. The number increased to 16,154 on Oct. 8. By nov. 12, 25,747 applications had been processed. "To me," Mr. Metz thinks it is great news that swarms of handout recipients have been enrolled.

That kind of talk may produce hoorays among the welfare establishment. But ordinary taxpayers are likely to be shocked and angered at such special efforts to increase the burden on the self- reliant members of society.

The truth is that every time the U. S. government provides handouts it encourages dependency as a permanent condition.

CPR: BETWEEN LIFE AND DEATH

When you suffer a heart attack, minutes - especially the first few minutes - can mean the difference between life and death.

Statistics tell the story: More that 680,000 die in the U.S. each year from heart attack. Approximately half that number die before they reach the hospital. And an estimated 50,000 could be saved if emergency care were available, at the scene and on the way.

The most immediate approach to saving lives is the Heart Association's training program in cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR). This is a reasonably easily- mastered technique in which someone trained in CPR applies mouth-to-mouth breathing and chest massage to restart the stopped heart in cases of cardiac arrest.

CPR is a first line emergency approach. Hopefully, it will keep the patient alive until more advanced life support - such as a coronary ambulance or a mobile coronary care unit - is available. Then this advanced life suppor t unit, staffed with trained personnel, takes over. With the aid of drugs and sophisticated equipment, they maintain life support until the patient reaches the hospital orcoronary care unit.

It is the Heart Association's belief that each community should be involved in this three-pronged approach to emergency care of heart attack victims: CPR training, an emergency transportation system and well-staffed and equipped coronary care facilities.

More than two-thirds of the nation's 7,000 general hospitals have facilities for coronary care. But providing CPR training for people in all walks of life - not only medical professionals and emergency personnel - costs money and manpower.

And money should not stand in the way of probgrams that can lower the death toll of the nation's Number One killer - cardiovascular disease. This is one of the ways the Heart Association spends the dollars you contribute to the Heart Fund. Give generously when your Heart volunteer calls.

HELP FOR THE ASHCROFT FAMILY

Attorney General John C. Danforth was the campaign manager for John D. Ashcroft when he ran unsuccessfully a few weeks ago for the office of Statae Auditor. The action by Missouri's Attorney General is most unusual. We do not recall any state official ever being a campaign manager for a person seeking what has always been considered a monor office.

General Danforth and Governor Christopher Bond and Mrs. Bond were on the trail for John Ashcroft for the office and they werked up and down and across the State of Missouri. The results, of course, are known. George Lehr defeated Ashcroft for the office and was sworn into thethat office in Jefferson City Monday.

But Governor Bond and General Danforth don't go back on their friends. John Ashcroft has been given a post with the office of the Atrtorney General and Mrs. Ashcroft has been given a nice post over in the Department of Revenue.

We rather imagine both Mr. and Mrs. Ashcroft are good, intelligent persons and will do their jobs well. But what we do wonder about is what Governor Bond is doing putting persons here and there in the Department of Revenue.

When the young millionaire was running up and down the State he was berating Governor Warren E. Hearnes and the Department of Revenue, indicating that Governor Hearnes was using the department to find jobs for his cronies. But lo and behold, the youthful governor is doing the same thing.

It seems to us it all depends who is tryinig to get jobs for whose friends.

DOWN IN THE DUMPS

About garbage - there's good news and there's bad news. The "good" news: There's more' than enough garbage for everyone. The bad: It's getting so bad that nobidy knows where to put it all.

However, experts hope to learn how to recycle much of the trash, making money and energy out of it and rescuing irreplaceable resources. Other wise, as one of them puts it, "The major metropolitan areas are standing in front of an avalanche and it is threatening to bury them."

Americans are better at producing trash than anybody else in the world: 5.5 pounds a day per American now.

Traditionally, in many communities the town dump is where a shrewd scavenger might find something of value: one man's trash seen as another man's treasure.

For many, making a regular trip to the town dump has become part of the way of life, providing the sort of uplift that goes with cleaning out the attic, and sometimes providing a reward in finding some discard that still has use left in it.

The beach resort of Kennebunkport, Me., now even celebrates a dump week. It has a dump that boasts a "slightly cluttered, homely appearance" and, for the celebration, a queen, Miss Dumpy.

But elsewhere, according to a survey by the nation's mayors, almost half of the cities across the country - 46 per cent of them - will run out of places to dump their trash within thenext one to five years.

There are some 12,000 dumping sites in America, say government health inspectors, and 94 per cent of them are "unacceptable," with rats, roaches, ripe odors, poisonous runoffs and polluting gases.

Landfills - daily covering dumps wastwith earth - protect the queasy but at the same time bury reclaimable bonanzas.

Less than 1 per cent of municipal waste now is re recycled. However, as an example of what might be saved, according to a Bureau of Mines expert, the 500,000 tons of fly ash produced from burning refuse every year could yield 150,000 pounds of reclaimed silver alone.

Besides retrieving valuable metals, say government experts, shredded burnable refuse could reclaim one quadrillion BTUs of energy a year, or about one-third of the energy expected from the Alaska oil pipeline.

Inside Labor

Victor Riesel

See Ted Kennedy Fighting McGovern for '76 Nomination

NEW YORK — One of those leathery roast beef banquets made history here the other evening though it was virtually unobserved, except by a few insiders. This gathering of over 800 labor officials and friends, assembled by the Jewish Labor Committee, was one of those rare political moments that contribute to the making and breaking of presidential candidates.

Labor's national establishment was there. As compensation for sacrificial efforts to gulp the inedible meat, I asked a few questions of some of those who help make national political policy for the labor movement. Like: "Who is going to be the candidate in '76?"

One of them, believe me a sagacious fellow and heavy contributor, snapped tartly when I insinuated they didn't have a winner (with whom to beat Jerry Ford):

"There isn't anybody and that's the goddam trouble. I'm still betting on Teddy (Kennedy). Where he goes he rips them off their chairs. I had Jackson and Humphrey at some of my conventions. They can't match Teddy. Even their people go gaga over him (Ted).

"Don't sell him short. I'm not."

There was no jest in this man's voice. Labor wants a winner. Obviously, from what developed later, when Meany spoke, the interpretation must be that they don't want Scoop Jackson and even if they did they don't think they could win with him.

Before we get to Meany's message, delivered as he honored the comparatively new and young Murray Finley, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers founded by the late Sidney Hillman), let's get to the grand three-tiered dais. On it, surrounding the chief, were Al Barkan, director of labor's Committee on Political Eduaation (COPE) which Meany calls the most powerful political machine in America; big steel labor's I.W. Abel, who fought, amid boos and howlings, for a Jackson nomination at the 1972 Democratic national convention; Louis Stulberg, president of the grandfather of labor politics, the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union; and Lane Kirkland the AFL-CIO's second-in-command.

There were other AFL -CIO vice presidentss such as Joe Tonelli, paperworkers' union president and the Textile Workers' Sol Stetin.

Meany's performance qualified him for membership in Actors' Equity. Imitating Jerry Ford, Meany described the President's Monday night speech as "a highly sophisticated Madison Avenue sales pitch with gestures." As he said this Meany swung his arms in wide arcs.

Then, labor's chief of chiefs, who by his own estimate must be considered the head of an organization which is a major after Secretary of State Kissinger and Sen. Jackson. The broad-beamed labor leader with dramatic and sardonic strokes, assailed "Henry to Henry" in international politics. He charged them with being deceitful. He laid it on the line as a betrayal of the U.S.

There was one historic throwaway line when Meany disclosed that Kissinger had told him that the Soviets were playing it "with restraint." The implication was that we should all be grateful. Kissinger's insinuation, of course.

Meany has attacked frontrunner Jackson elsewhere but not more significantly. This was a predominantly Jewish audience though the dinner was held on Martin Luther King Day and black leader Bayard Rustin sang four short spirituals. Jewish communities across the nation have been the base of Jackson's coming-out campaign.

Yet here were almost 800 knowledgeable, politically active Jewish leaders and associates in the Hilton Hotel Grand Ballroom as Meany ripped Jackson. The crowd on the floor and the leaders on the dais were with Meany. And 800 sophisticated men and women, many of them political as well as labor leaders in their own right, are a sufficient cross-section of America's Jewish activists to satisfy any public opinion poll. They were with Meany, their applause proved that.

Therefore I interpret the diners' reaction to Meany's sarcastic needling of Jackson as the Senator's loss of his strongest operating base. I also interpret this as COPE's rejection of Jackson as a viable presidential candidate in 1976.

So, whom will labor's establishment support? It's split. It blows hot and cold on names as they pop up in these early weeks of the '76 campaign. There's a rebellion inside COPE. Behind the scenes, sides are lining up in roughly what can be considered the McGovern bloc vs. the old Jackson or neutral bloc.

This fight has been roaring since Dec. 13 when Bill Holayter, director of the Machinist Non-Partisan Political League, dispatched a three-page letter to all members of the COPE Operating Committee. In effect, he said that Al Barkan was bad news becaue he is opposed to quotas for minorities and proportional representation inside the Democratic party. There have been sharp replies. Letters have come in from six or eight national labor leaders defending Barkan. It will be fought out during COPE's three-day working session in mid-February during the AFL - CIO.Executive Council meeting.

So the lines are up. McGovern vs. who? Ted Kennedy, some say. Except for those labor chiefs who are waiting for Rocky.

And if Meany isn't paying dues to Actors' Equity, he's cheating one of his own unions.

JACK ANDERSON SAYS: Pressures From Presidents Past

WASHINGTON---- The preliminary, secret testimony in the CIA investigation has focused on the White House itself.

Former CIA chief Richard Helms, according to sources close to the investigation, testified behind closed doors that he had been pressured by both presidents Lyndon Johnson and Richard Nixon to spy on Vietnam War protesters.

As far back as 1967, Helms alleged, Johnson began badgering him to investigate any connection between the protest movement and foreign enemies.

Both Johnson and Nixon suspected that the Communists were pumping money into the antiwar movement. However, Helms reported that the CIA found no significant foreign influence.

Some radical groups, such as the Black Panthers and the Weathermen, had foreign contacts. But the student opposition to the war effort was largely an American phenomenon, said Helms.

His secret testimony was taken by the President's Commission to Investigate the Central Intelligence Agency. Other witnesses confirmed that the CIA files on American citizens largely grew out of the Johnson-Nixon concern over the antiwar agitation.

At first, the Secret Service began investigating every group, no matter how innocent, that expressed the slightest criticism of the President. The Nonviolent Direct Action group came under surveillance, as a typical example, because it "urged members to write Pres and other govt officials to protest war in Vietnam," according to confidential Secret Service records.

By late 1970, the Secret Service developed a computer network, which now contains information on more than 180,000 Americans. Other government agencies also began trading information. Files began to grow on tens of thousands of citizens who were guilty of nothing more serious than shooting off their mouths gainst the President's policies.

Dozens of celebrities wound up in the files, including comedians Dick Gregory, Groucho Marx and Tony Randall; actors Marion Brando, Paul Newman and Rock Hudson; actor-producer Carl Reiner; conservative news commentator Paul Harvey; and folk singer Joan Baez.

The CIA, of course, got caught up in the hysteria. There were times when the CIA overstepped its legal limits and conducted domestic surveillance. It became increasingly difficult to draw the line between legitimate security and political security.

This was the atmosphere in the backrooms of the CIA when the Watergate caper began. The CIA didn't balk, therefore, at furnishing E. Howard Hunt with a reddish wig, glasses, a speech alteration devise a set of alias documents, a tape recorder concealed in a portable typewriter case, two microphones and a camera disguised in a tobacco pouch.

Hunt used this James Bond paraphernalia to carry out his Watergate assignments. The CIA has insisted in secret statements that it had no knowledge of Hunt's Watergate role. The supply officer, Cleo Gephart, has sworn that he though Hunt was a member of the CIA's Domestic Contact Service.

This is the branch that interviews U.S. travelers who might pick up interesting information abroad. Gephart didn't explain why Hunt would need a fancy disguise if he were merely conducting routine interviews.

It is also interesting that the CIA converted the Domestic Contact Service from a routine intelligence operation to a clandestine service in 1973. This was done ostensibly for budgetary reasons. But once the unit became a clandestine service, the CIA was no longer obligated to give Congress a detailed account of its activities.

In fairness, it should be added that Helms resisted most of the pressure from the White House to go beyond his legal authority.

He says that if it is true that armed intervention is not technically feasible, then we have ceased to be a great power, for it would be difficult to find a group of states with a weaker collective military capability.

As to the spectre of counter-intervention by the Soviets, the professor argues that the very heavy risk to the Soviets of military involvement is not justified by the stakes involved — for them. It is not the Soviet jugular that is under attack.

Basically, Professor Tucker argues throughout his article that the U.S. still does have the capability of military intervention, that the Soviets are not likely to risk war with the United States over the issue, that the destruction and sabotage of the oil fields would not be unmanageable, and that neither our allies nor U.S. public opinion would necessarily be as outraged as some imagine.

We don't know whether Dr. Kissinger has studied the professor's thesis, but even his statement that there could be some valid grounds for U.S. intervention may add a useful new dimension to what is obviously a grave international crisis. Military force should not be used except when vital interests are at stake, but it still remains the ultimate sanction in world affairs. If nations such as the Arab oil producers should conclude that they can act against us in any manner whatsoever with complete impunity, then we are surely finished as a great nation, and we can expect the consequences to follow in short order.

We're glad to see our Secretary of State show a little backbone. We'd like to see a lot more of it.

IS THE GAP CLOSING?

The so-called generation gap is much overrated.

So says Gisela Konopka, professor of social work at the university of Minnesota and director of the university's Center for Youth Development and Research.

The barriers that do exist between young and old are primarily artificial, she argues, and fear is the main reason for their existence.

There is fear of the unknown and fear of change, aided and abetted by the repetition of catch phrases like "generation gap," "breakdown of the family," "future shock" and "permissiveness."

Familes today may actually be moving toward closer relationships as they become more democratic, she thinks. Fast and easy transportation and communication allow physically separated families to get together often. Rather than destroying the family, increased mobility may be recreating the pattern of the neighborhood family.

The new family relationship is not "permissive" in the sense that one can always do what one wants. Rather, it means that adults must consciously share their value systems with the young and expect challenging and questioning. Young people in turn have to think through their value systems.

"We cannot always build agreement," says Prof. Konopka, "but we must try to build trust."

Such acts must be stopped and punished - whether they occur in Mississippi or in New York. Under our Constitution, the local authorities have the central responsibility for civil peace. There is no place in our Federal system for a national police force. But where help is needed or Federal law is violated, we shall be there. We will work together to punish all such lawbreakers, whether they be murderers in the countryside, or hooded nightriders on the highways, or hoodlums in the city.

ENERGY AND LIFE

There are so many ways in which electric energy sustains civilization and life as we know it that it is impossible to single out precisely where its utilization is most important. Even the most ardent antiergy advocate should find cause to ponder the wisdom of opposing new power plant construction without due regard for the consequences.

An advertisement of the Investor-Owned Electric Light and Power Companies, which appeared in a news magazine a short time ago, describes the role of electricity in a modern hospital. It uses a hospital in suburban Philadelphia as an example. It tells how "Hundreds of people in eastern Pennsylvania are living happy, healthy lives today because of electronic 'assistants' ... "working around the clock oin that hospital. Electricity powers heart-lung machines, artificial kidneys, resuscitators, incubators, spirometers and cardiac catheterization equipment. Electricity powers a new electron microscope, capable of a 60,000 magnification print of the nucleus of a virus-infected cell. Of course, electricity serves the hospital in the conventional way that everyone takes for granted -- lighting, cooking, cleaning, etc. Power failure at a hospital is catastrophic.

Multiply the Pennsylvania hospital and its dependence on electricity by hundreds and thousands and some conception of the importance of electricity to life can be grasped. We are now threatened with a power shortage, in large part, due to basic misunderstandings about electricity and the environment. These misunderstandings must be corrected. As the advertisement concludes, "To produce the power needed, new electric generating plants must be built now. They must be built for the most efficient performance and with the best safeguards for the environment we can design -- now. Meanwhile we must be searching for even better ways to generate electricity."

The country can no longer afford the stop-everything brand of environmentalism that has cut the energy margin perilously thin. Energy sources must be developed, and the developers must be permitted to earn the money that will attract the billions of investments dollars that are needed. Ther perpetuation of all things the American people value most highly -- freedom, health, high living standards, and a secure nation -- allow no other recourse.

FOOD STAMPS AND INFLATION

As politicians talk about curbing inflation and arresting the recession, it is interesting to note that the welfare establishment is doing its best to add to the U. S. budget deficit.

Around the country, according to Anthony Harrigan, wefwelfare administrators are trying to get more people to use food stamps. Spenders in Congress are bitterly opposing President Ford's proposal for even a small -- $325 million -- cutback in foodstamp spending.

Consider what is happening in North Carolina. Wayne Metz, directors of the Guilford County Social Services Department, recently stated that when he took charge of the department last July only 2,800 persons had been certified as eligible for food stamps. The number increased to 16,154 on Oct. 8. By nov. 12, 25,747 applications had been processed. "To me," Mr. Metz thinks it is great news that swarms of handout recipients have been enrolled.

That kind of talk may produce hoorays among the welfare establishment. But ordinary taxpayers are likely to be shocked and angered at such special efforts to increase the burden on the self- reliant members of society.

The truth is that every time the U. S. government provides handouts it encourages dependency as a permanent condition.

CPR: BETWEEN LIFE AND DEATH

When you suffer a heart attack, minutes - especially the first few minutes - can mean the difference between life and death.

Statistics tell the story: More that 680,000 die in the U.S. each year from heart attack. Approximately half that number die before they reach the hospital. And an estimated 50,000 could be saved if emergency care were available, at the scene and on the way.

The most immediate approach to saving lives is the Heart Association's training program in cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR). This is a reasonably easily- mastered technique in which someone trained in CPR applies mouth-to-mouth breathing and chest massage to restart the stopped heart in cases of cardiac arrest.

CPR is a first line emergency approach. Hopefully, it will keep the patient alive until more advanced life support - such as a coronary ambulance or a mobile coronary care unit - is available. Then this advanced life suppor t unit, staffed with trained personnel, takes over. With the aid of drugs and sophisticated equipment, they maintain life support until the patient reaches the hospital orcoronary care unit.

It is the Heart Association's belief that each community should be involved in this three-pronged approach to emergency care of heart attack victims: CPR training, an emergency transportation system and well-staffed and equipped coronary care facilities.

More than two-thirds of the nation's 7,000 general hospitals have facilities for coronary care. But providing CPR training for people in all walks of life - not only medical professionals and emergency personnel - costs money and manpower.

And money should not stand in the way of probgrams that can lower the death toll of the nation's Number One killer - cardiovascular disease. This is one of the ways the Heart Association spends the dollars you contribute to the Heart Fund. Give generously when your Heart voluneer calls.

HELP FOR THE ASHCROFT FAMILY

Attorney General John C. Danforth was the campaign manager for John D. Ashcroft when he ran unsuccessfully a few weeks ago for the office of Statae Auditor. The action by Missouri's Attorney General is most unusual. We do not recall any state official ever being a campaign manager for a person seeking what has always been considered a monor office.

General Danforth and Governor Christopher Bond and Mrs. Bond were on the trail for John Ashcroft for the office and they werked up and down and across the State of Missouri. The results, of course, are known. George Lehr defeated Ashcroft for the office and was sworn into thethat office in Jefferson City Monday.

But Governor Bond and General Danforth don't go back on their friends. John Ashcroft has been given a post with the office of the Atrtorney General and Mrs. Ashcroft has been given a nice post over in the Department of Revenue.

We rather imagine both Mr. and Mrs. Ashcroft are good, intelligent persons and will do their jobs well. But what we do wonder about is what Governor Bond is doing putting persons here and there in the Department of Revenue.

When the young millionaire was running up and down the State he was berating Governor Warren E. Hearnes and the Department of Revenue, indicating that Governor Hearnes was using the department to find jobs for his cronies. But lo and behold, the youthful governor is doing the same thing.

It seems to us it all depends who is tryinig to get jobs for whose friends.

DOWN IN THE DUMPS

About garbage - there's good news and there's bad news. The "good" news: There's more' than enough garbage for everyone. The bad: It's getting so bad that nobidy knows where to put it all.

However, experts hope to learn how to recycle much of the trash, making money and energy out of it and rescuing irreplaceable resources. Other wise, as one of them puts it, "The major metropolitan areas are standing in front of an avalanche and it is threatening to bury them."

Americans are better at producing trash than anybody else in the world: 5.5 pounds a day per American now.

Traditionally, in many communities the town dump is where a shrewd scavenger might find something of value: one man's trash seen as another man's treasure.

For many, making a regular trip to the town dump has become part of the way of life, providing the sort of uplift that goes with cleaning out the attic, and sometimes providing a reward in finding some discard that still has use left in it.

The beach resort of Kennebunkport, Me., now even celebrates a dump week. It has a dump that boasts a "slightly cluttered, homely appearance" and, for the celebration, a queen, Miss Dumpy.

But elsewhere, according to a survey by the nation's mayors, almost half of the cities across the country - 46 per cent of them - will run out of places to dump their trash within thenext one to five years.

There are some 12,000 dumping sites in America, say government health inspectors, and 94 per cent of them are "unacceptable," with rats, roaches, ripe odors, poisonous runoffs and polluting gases.

Landfills - daily covering dumps wastwith earth - protect the queasy but at the same time bury reclaimable bonanzas.

Less than 1 per cent of municipal waste now is re recycled. However, as an example of what might be saved, according to a Bureau of Mines expert, the 500,000 tons of fly ash produced from burning refuse every year could yield 150,000 pounds of reclaimed silver alone.

Besides retrieving valuable metals, say government experts, shredded burnable refuse could reclaim one quadrillion BTUs of energy a year, or about one-third of the energy expected from the Alaska oil pipeline.

Inside Labor

Victor Riesel

See Ted Kennedy Fighting McGovern for '76 Nomination

NEW YORK — One of those leathery roast beef banquets made history here the other evening though it was virtually unobserved, except by a few insiders. This gathering of over 800 labor officials and friends, assembled by the Jewish Labor Committee, was one of those rare political moments that contribute to the making and breaking of presidential candidates.

Labor's national establishment was there. As compensation for sacrificial efforts to gulp the inedible meat, I asked a few questions of some of those who help make national political policy for the labor movement. Like: "Who is going to be the candidate in '76?"

One of them, believe me a sagacious fellow and heavy contributor, snapped tartly when I insinuated they didn't have a winner (with whom to beat Jerry Ford):

"There isn't anybody and that's the goddam trouble. I'm still betting on Teddy (Kennedy). Where he goes he rips them off their chairs. I had Jackson and Humphrey at some of my conventions. They can't match Teddy. Even their people go gaga over him (Ted).

"Don't sell him short. I'm not."

There was no jest in this man's voice. Labor wants a winner. Obviously, from what developed later, when Meany spoke, the interpretation must be that they don't want Scoop Jackson and even if they did they don't think they could win with him.

Before we get to Meany's message, delivered as he honored the comparatively new and young Murray Finley, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers founded by the late Sidney Hillman), let's get to the grand three-tiered dais. On it, surrounding the chief, were Al Barkan, director of labor's Committee on Political Eduaation (COPE) which Meany calls the most powerful political machine in America; big steel labor's I.W. Abel, who fought, amid boos and howlings, for a Jackson nomination at the 1972 Democratic national convention; Louis Stulberg, president of the grandfather of labor politics, the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union; and Lane Kirkland the AFL-CIO's second-in-command.

There were other AFL -CIO vice presidentss such as Joe Tonelli, paperworkers' union president and the Textile Workers' Sol Stetin.

Meany's performance qualified him for membership in Actors' Equity. Imitating Jerry Ford, Meany described the President's Monday night speech as "a highly sophisticated Madison Avenue sales pitch with gestures." As he said this Meany swung his arms in wide arcs.

Then, labor's chief of chiefs, who by his own estimate must be considered the head of an organization which is a major arter Secretary of State Kissinger and Sen. Jackson. The broad-beamed labor leader with dramatic and sardonic strokes, assailed "Henry to Henry" in ternational politics. He charged them with being deceitful. He laid it on the line as a betrayal of the U.S.

There was one historic throwaway line when Meany disclosed that Kissinger had told him that the Soviets were playing it "with restraint." The implication was that we should all be grateful. Kissinger's insinuation, of course.

Meany has attacked frontrunner Jackson elsewhere but not more significantly. This was a predominantly Jewish audience though the dinner was held on Martin Luther King Day and black leader Bayard Rustin sang four short spirituals. Jewish communities across the nation have been the base of Jackson's coming-out campaign.

Yet here were almost 800 knowledgeable, politically active Jewish leaders and associates in the Hilton Hotel Grand Ballroom as Meany ripped Jackson. The crowd on the floor and the leaders on the dais were with Meany. And 800 sophisticated men and women, many of them political as well as labor leaders in their own right, are a sufficient cross-section of America's Jewish activists to satisfy any public opinion poll. They were with Meany, their applause proved that.

Therefore I interpret the diners' reaction to Meany's sarcastic needling of Jackson as the Senator's loss of his strongest operating base. I also interpret this as COPE's rejection of Jackson as a viable presidential candidate in 1976.

So, whom will labor's establishment support? It's split. It blows hot and cold on names as they pop up in these early weeks of the '76 campaign. There's a rebellion inside COPE. Behind the scenes, sides are lining up in roughly what can be considered the McGovern bloc vs. the old Jackson or neutral bloc.

This fight has been roaring since Dec. 13 when Bill Holayter, director of the Machinist Non-Partisan Political League, dispatched a three-page letter to all members of the COPE Operating Committee. In effect, he said that Al Barkan was bad news becaue he is opposed to quotas for minorities and proportional representation inside the Democratic party. There have been sharp replies. Letters have come in from six or eight national labor leaders defending Barkan. It will be fought out during COPE's three-day working session in mid-February during the AFL - CIO.Executive Council meeting.

So the lines are up. McGovern vs. who? Ted Kennedy, some say. Except for those labor chiefs who are waiting for Rocky.

And if Meany isn't paying dues to Actors' Equity, he's cheating one of his own unions.

JACK ANDERSON SAYS: Pressures From Presidents Past

WASHINGTON---- The preliminary, secret testimony in the CIA investigation has focused on the White House itself.

Former CIA chief Richard Helms, according to sources close to the investigation, testified behind closed doors that he had been pressured by both presidents Lyndon Johnson and Richard Nixon to spy on Vietnam War protesters.

As far back as 1967, Helms alleged, Johnson began badgering him to investigate any connection between the protest movement and foreign enemies.

Both Johnson and Nixon suspected that the Communists were pumping money into the antiwar movement. However, Helms reported that the CIA found no significant foreign influence.

Some radical groups, such as the Black Panthers and the Weathermen, had foreign contacts. But the student opposition to the war effort was largely an American phenomenon, said Helms.

His secret testimony was taken by the President's Commission to Investigate the Central Intelligence Agency. Other witnesses confirmed that the CIA files on American citizens largely grew out of the Johnson-Nixon concern over the antiwar agitation.

At first, the Secret Service began investigating every group, no matter how innocent, that expressed the slightest criticism of the President. The Nonviolent Direct Action group came under surveillance, as a typical example, because it "urged members to write Pres and other govt officials to protest war in Vietnam," according to confidential Secret Service records.

By late 1970, the Secret Service developed a computer network, which now contains information on more than 180,000 Americans. Other government agencies also began trading information. Files began to grow on tens of thousands of citizens who were guilty of nothing more serious than shooting off their mouths gainst the President's policies.

Dozens of celebrities wound up in the files, including comedians Dick Gregory, Groucho Marx and Tony Randall; actors Marion Brando, Paul Newman and Rock Hudson; actor-producer Carl Reiner; conservative news commentator Paul Harvey; and folk singer Joan Baez.

The CIA, of course, got caught up in the hysteria. There were times when the CIA overstepped its legal limits and conducted domestic surveillance. It became increasingly difficult to draw the line between legitimate security and political security.

This was the atmosphere in the backrooms of the CIA when the Watergate caper began. The CIA didn't balk, therefore, at furnishing E. Howard Hunt with a reddish wig, glasses, a speech alteration devise a set of alias documents, a tape recorder concealed in a portable typewriter case, two microphones and a camera disguised in a tobacco pouch.

Hunt used this James Bond paraphernalia to carry out his Watergate assignments. The CIA has insisted in secret statements that it had no knowledge of Hunt's Watergate role. The supply officer, Cleo Gephart, has sworn that he though Hunt was a member of the CIA's Domestic Contact Service.

This is the branch that interviews U.S. travelers who might pick up interesting information abroad. Gephart didn't explain why Hunt would need a fancy disguise if he were merely conducting routine interviews.

It is also interesting that the CIA converted the Domestic Contact Service from a routine intelligence operation to a clandestine service in 1973. This was done ostensibly for budgetary reasons. But once the unit became a clandestine service, the CIA was no longer obligated to give Congress a detailed account of its activities.

In fairness, it should be added that Helms resisted most of the pressure from the White House to go beyond his legal authority.

Cape senior top winner in writing contest

OVERLAND, Mo. (AP) — A Cape Girardeau high school senior has been selected to represent Missouri in the Veteran of Foreign War's national Voice of Democracy writing contest.

Michael Renfro was named the statewide winner Saturday at an awards presentation in this St. Louis County community. The 17-year-old youth attends Central High School in Cape Girardeau.

For winning the state contest, Renfro received $200 in savings bonds, a plaque for his school and a five-day, expense-paid trip to Washington, D.C., for the national competition in March.

Second place in voting by a panel of five judges went to Nancy Breeden of Washington, Mo. Finishing third was Britt Thedinger of St. Joseph, fourth was Teresa Beyer of Peculiar, and tied for fifth were Ronald Lee Mason of Hickman Mills and Michael Wakeland of Ferguson.

The theme of the 28th annual Voice of Democracy script writing and broadcasting program competition was "My Responsibility as a Citizen." Some 2,400 high school students throughout the state initially entered the contest. School winners advanced to district competition, from which 16 students went on the statewide contest.

Council seeks Eagle Scouts in SeMo area

A second announcement is being made in an attempt to locate all Eagle Scouts in the Southeast Missouri Boy Scout Council, according to Walter Hedrick of Sikeston, chairman of the council's advancement committee who is heading up the effort to locate the names and addresses of all Eagles, regardless of whether they received the award in the SeMo council or the year they received it.

Hedrick said these Eagles will be honored at the annual Eagle Court of Honor on Feb. 23.

The Eagle award has been given by the national organization for 64 years.

"It is our idea to try to find out how many Eagles we have in the council and also to bring as many of them together as possible," Hedrick said. "We purposely aren't saying 'past' Eagle Scouts because the Eagle award is for life."

As of Jan. 1, Hedrick said approximately 100 Eagle award holders had been located.

He asks all Eagles or friends of Eagles to contact the council's Boy Scout service center in Cape Girardeau (P.O. Box 637) so as many names as possible can be placed on the invitation list.

"Even if the Eagle Award holder cannot attend the Court of Honor, the council is interested in obtaining his name so a list can be printed in a program for the affair," Hedrick added.

The Court of Honor will be held in Academic Hall at Southeast Missouri State University, following a dinner at Holiday Inn in Cape Girardeau. After the Court of Honor, a reception in honor of the current Eagle award winners will be hosted by Dr. and Mrs. Mark Scully. Dr. Scully is president of Southeast Missouri State University and has served for the past two years as president of the Southeast Missouri Boy Scout Council.

The information needed by the council office on every Eagle in the area includes the name, current address, year Eagle award was received and the name of the council where the award was earned.

Mayor Ferrell encourages Sikeston residents to become better acquainted with the outstanding advances in the fields of engineering.

Missouri artist, Benton dies in Kansas City at 85

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Thomas Hart Benton, whose paintings bore a rugged flavor about America that gained for him world renown, died late Sunday night at a hospital here.

Three months short of his 86th birthday, Benton was taken from his studio by ambulance to a midtown hospital where he was pronounced dead.

A friend of the family quoted the artist's widow, Rita, as saying that Sunday afternoon he had completed a mural depicting the origins of country music which had been commissioned by the Country Music Foundation in Nashville, Tenn.

After dinner in the home the couple owned here for 45 years, Benton returned to his studio, which is set up in a carriage house behind the residence. Mrs. Benton found her husband on the floor. He apparently had fallen from a chair.

When he started the Country Music mural nearly a year ago, he said it would be his last. However, little weight was given the statement by his many followers, who recalled him issuing the same warning 14 years earlier. Then he was commissioned by the Harry S. Truman Library in Independence, Mo., to render a depiction of the pioneer spirit in the main lobby. That was to be it, he said then, because "I'm just too old to do all that climbing of ladders."

The library's "Independence and the Opening of the West" was followed in 1973 by another mural that was to be his last — "Joplin at the Turn of the Century." The city in southwest Missouri was depicted as the wide-open boom town the artist recalled from his days as a 17-year-old cartoonist for a Joplin newspaper. He placed himself in the scene, seated at a drawing board.

Diminutive — he was five five feet tall — Benton offered a fiery individualism that haunted him sporadically through his long artistic career, yet carried him to heights he never could have imagined.

He made no effort to conceal his lifelong love affair with his home state of Missouri, which had balanced itself through many of his recollections between agriculture, railroads and, in many instances, shady politics. The rural flavor to which he was born and the early influences of urban centers was translated in the 1920s and 1930s into a school of art he developed with fellow Midwesterners John Steuart Curry of Kansas and Grant Wood of Iowa. The concept, becoming known as Regionalism, had the artists mirroring America's image of itself.

His family was well-established in Missouri. He was the namesake of Thomas Hart Benton, a great uncle and U. S. senator for three decades.

Four decades ago Benton struck the wrath of fellow Missourians with a massive mural that depicted corrupt politicians alongside the great ones and barroom brawls bleeding onto placid harvest scenes. However, he said it was one of his best and it stands today as one of the prime attractions in the building for which it ws intended, the state Capitol.

Never one to contain potent opinions, Benton developed as an extremely controversial figure in the art world. "I'll tell you what's the matter with the art business in America," he once said. "It's the third sex and the museums. The pretty boys with the delicate wrists and the swing in their gait run the museums because it's a field most living men wouldn't take on. Most of them hate my pictures. I wouldn't be in the museums at all if the people didn't demand my representation." A declining demand for Benton's artistic approach and his incontrovertible expressions of opinion were to take their financial tolls, but he experienced a sharp rebound and lived to register surprise that some of his less-spectacular efforts could attract offers as high as $65,000.

Many of the works were America as he saw it — from the vantage of boyhood in Neosho and Joplin, a couple of rough Missouri mining towns — and as he dwelled on it — from time spent studying art in Chicago and Paris. Among others of his best-known works are "Modern America," painted with Mexican muralist Clemente Orozco for the New School for Social Research in New York; "Boomtown," at the Rochester Museum and "Cotton Pickers," at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York.

He lived in New York for 23 years, Rita Piacenza, a student at the Chelsea Neighborhood Association, where he taught, became his wife in 1922. They had two children, Jessie P. Lyman of Los Angeles and Thomas P. Benton of Boston.

Benton seized the opportunity to return to Missouri in 1935 and work on the statehouse mural. His link to the East Coast has remained the seaside home at Martha's Vineyard in Massachusetts, where the Bentons summered through last season for more than 40 years.

Their strong individualism and common affection for Missouri cemented a strong friendship for Benton and former President Harry S. Truman. Truman considered him "the best damned painter in America."

ST. LOUIS — Many Missouri taxpayers will not be able to receive early refunds this year unless they receive their W-2 forms from their employers soon.

IRS District Director Richard C. Voskuil today reminded employers that Jan. 31 is the last day to have completed W-2 forms in the hands of their employes.

Cape senior top winner in writing contest

OVERLAND, Mo. (AP) — A Cape Girardeau high school senior has been selected to represent Missouri in the Veteran of Foreign War's national Voice of Democracy writing contest.

Michael Renfro was named the statewide winner Saturday at an awards presentation in this St. Louis County community. The 17-year-old youth attends Central High School in Cape Girardeau.

For winning the state contest, Renfro received $200 in savings bonds, a plaque for his school and a five-day, expense-paid trip to Washington, D.C., for the national competition in March.

Second place in voting by a panel of five judges went to Nancy Breeden of Washington, Mo. Finishing third was Britt Thedinger of St. Joseph, fourth was Teresa Beyer of Peculiar, and tied for fifth were Ronald Lee Mason of Hickman Mills and Michael Wakeland of Ferguson.

The theme of the 28th annual Voice of Democracy script writing and broadcasting program competition was "My Responsibility as a Citizen." Some 2,400 high school students throughout the state initially entered the contest. School winners advanced to district competition, from which 16 students went on the statewide contest.

Council seeks Eagle Scouts in SeMo area

A second announcement is being made in an attempt to locate all Eagle Scouts in the Southeast Missouri Boy Scout Council, according to Walter Hedrick of Sikeston, chairman of the council's advancement committee who is heading up the effort to locate the names and addresses of all Eagles, regardless of whether they received the award in the SeMo council or the year they received it.

Hedrick said these Eagles will be honored at the annual Eagle Court of Honor on Feb. 23.

The Eagle award has been given by the national organization for 64 years.

"It is our idea to try to find out how many Eagles we have in the council and also to bring as many of them together as possible," Hedrick said. "We purposely aren't saying 'past' Eagle Scouts because the Eagle award is for life."

As of Jan. 1, Hedrick said approximately 100 Eagle award holders had been located.

He asks all Eagles or friends of Eagles to contact the council's Boy Scout service center in Cape Girardeau (P.O. Box 637) so as many names as possible can be placed on the invitation list.

"Even if the Eagle Award holder cannot attend the Court of Honor, the council is interested in obtaining his name so a list can be printed in a program for the affair," Hedrick added.

The Court of Honor will be held in Academic Hall at Southeast Missouri State University, following a dinner at Holiday Inn in Cape Girardeau. After the Court of Honor, a reception in honor of the current Eagle award winners will be hosted by Dr. and Mrs. Mark Scully. Dr. Scully is president of Southeast Missouri State University and has served for the past two years as president of the Southeast Missouri Boy Scout Council.

The information needed by the council office on every Eagle in the area includes the name, current address, year Eagle award was received and the name of the council where the award was earned.

Missouri artist, Benton dies in Kansas City at 85

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Thomas Hart Benton, whose paintings bore a rugged flavor about America that gained for him world renown, died late Sunday night at a hospital here.

Three months short of his 86th birthday, Benton was taken from his studio by ambulance to a midtown hospital where he was pronounced dead.

A friend of the family quoted the artist's widow, Rita, as saying that Sunday afternoon he had completed a mural depicting the origins of country music which had been commissioned by the Country Music Foundation in Nashville, Tenn.

Flu virus causes no problems

No new restrictions have been required at Missouri Delta Community Hospital because of influenza-like infections, according to administrator Harold Jones.

Jones says the number of flue cases has not been severe enough to pose a problem in this area.

Because of a flu epidemic in the Kansas City area, and Charles C. Lindstrom, chairman of the Kansas City Area Hospital Board, urged last week that only members of the immediate family visit patients and that they limit the number of visits.

Jones said Missouri Delta Community Hospital has not published an admissions list for several years and asks that only two persons at a time visit a patient for a limit of 30 minutes per visit.

This has helped make visiting hours less hectic, but the thing that has helped the most, Jones said, is the hospital's policy of visiting hours, which permits patients to have visitors any time between 11 a.m. and 8 p.m. Since this policy has been in effect, people are able to see a patient during the day time and make their visits briefer, he added.

$30 in change, 2 guns taken over weekend

A coin box from a soft drink vending machine, two guns and a purse were reported stolen over the weekend, police announced today.

A coin box containing about $30 in change was taken from a vending machine at Speed Queen Coin Launrdy, 100 S. Pine St., about 8:15 p.m. Friday.

Police said a man came in saying he was a repairman from Pepsi-Cola Bottling Co. and had come to fix the machine. Police said the man had an attendant to open the machine for him, then took the coin box and left.

Jessie Berry, 228 Alabama St., told police some one took a .38 - caliber police special and .22-caliber Derringer from his home. He discovered the guns missing Sunday.

A purse belonging to Frances Haddock of East Prairie was taken about 1:15 a.m. Sunday from King Arthur's Lounge at Kingsway Plaza Mall.

The purse contained $40 and personal papers.

Assessors say tax collection unlawful

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP(- Property tax collections in Missouri amount to more than the state's income and sales taxes combined, but the manner in which the tax is currently being collected is unlawful, according to some state officials and county assessors.

Because of a law which went into effect Dec. 31, 1974, assessors have been ordered by the state Tax Commission to increase by 11 per cent the rate at which residential property is valued. The law requires all property to be assessed at 33 and one-third per cent of its value. Prior to the new law, a 30 per cent assessment was used.

George Lehr, who took over Monday as state auditor, says assessors are unable to comply with the law because "they have no tools to work with, no budget, no personnel."

Lehr, a Democrat and former Jackson County official, said he will conduct a "massive audit" of every county in the state to show the failings of the assessment measure.

"There are some who are thinking you're taking after the assessors," Lehr was told at a meeting Friday by Ralls County Assessor John C. Briscoe. He was joined in the meeting by Cecil Jacobi Jr., Saline County assessor, Selwyn A. Light of Iron County, Howard Gaffke of Cole County and Holloway Neill of Audrain County. Neill is president of the Missouri Assessors Association.

Tax commission officials, Lehr and the assessors themselves readily admit that the law is not being followed.

But Jacobi noted that "the law has not been followed for 100 years," referring to a section of the Missouri Constitution which required a 100 per cent true value assessment.

The audit was called, Lehr said, not to show any irregularities on the part of the assessors, but to show the need for some drastic changes in the way property taxes are collected in the state. What's needed, he said, was a whole new package of legislation to reform the classification of property and the method it's assessed.

Hopkins home is burglarized

CHARLESTON--Police are investigating a break-in and theft which occured sometime between Jan. 15 and Saturday at the Mary Hopkins residence on S. Heggie St.

A front door lock was pried open and a black and white television set valued at $400, two portable record players, with a total value of $50 and a clock radio valued at $30 were reported stolen.

An attempted break-in at the Enterprise Courier office on Main Street was reported to police Saturday morning. Locks on a rear door had been pried, but the door was not opened.

A wheel and tire was stolen sometime between 5 p.m. Friday and 8 a.m. Saturday from a 1972 automobile on the Courtesy Ford Motor Co. parking lot on E. Marshall Street.

Sturgeon, whose roe, or eggs, is washed and salted to make caviar, has been considered a royal fish since ancient times. In Roman days, it was bedecked with flowers and borne to the emperors' tables in grandeur. A law enacted in the reign of King Edward II made any sturgeon caught in England the property of the king.

Burglars hit 3 businesses

NEW MADRID — Burglars were on the move late Friday night and early Saturday morning in the city when three business firms were entered and thefts of citizen band radios were also reported.

Police said Knight's Department Store, 331 Main St., was entered Friday night or Saturday morning through an unlocked second-story window. Mens' clothing, consisting of one suit, four sports coats, shirts, sweaters and a felt hat, and two suitcases were reported stolen.

A quantity of cigarettes and a small amount of money from two cigarette machines were taken in a break-in Saturday between 2 a.m. and 5:30 a.m. at Rosie's Colonial Restaurant on Highway 61, where a kitchen window was knocked out.

A cigarette machine in the restaurant and one in the bar had been pried open and a juke box in the bar was damaged when an unsuccessful attempt was made to open it.

The L and P Grain office, just west of Highway 61 was broken into and searched, however nothing was found missing. A front door glass had been broken to enter the building.

Three citizen band radios were stolen from vehicles belonging to Sam L. Hunter Jr. that were parked at his home, 951 St. Jack Long, 901 Scott St., reported a citizen band radio was stolen from his car parked in a garage at his home. Both men said the cars were locked.

A soft drink machine outside Hendrick's Grocery on Rt. U was broken into and an unknown amount of money taken.

George Lehr, who took over Monday as state auditor, says assessors are unable to comply with the law because "they have no tools to work with, no budget, no personnel."

Lehr, a Democrat and former Jackson County official, said he will conduct a "massive audit" of every county in the state to show the failings of the assessment measure.

"There are some who are thinking you're taking after the assessors," Lehr was told at a meeting Friday by Ralls County Assessor John C. Briscoe. He was joined in the meeting by Cecil Jacobi Jr., Saline County assessor, Selwyn A. Light of Iron County, Howard Gaffke of Cole County and Holloway Neill of Audrain County. Neill is president of the Missouri Assessors Association.

Tax commission officials, Lehr and the assessors themselves readily admit that the law is not being followed.

But Jacobi noted that "the law has not been followed for 100 years," referring to a section of the Missouri Constitution which required a 100 per cent true value assessment.

The audit was called, Lehr said, not to show any irregularities on the part of the assessors, but to show the need for some drastic changes in the way property taxes are collected in the state. What's needed, he said, was a whole new package of legislation to reform the classification of property and the method it's assessed.

Hopkins home is burglarized

CHARLESTON--Police are investigating a break-in and theft which occured sometime between Jan. 15 and Saturday at the Mary Hopkins residence on S. Heggie St.

A front door lock was pried open and a black and white television set valued at $400, two portable record players, with a total value of $50 and a clock radio valued at $30 were reported stolen.

Sturgeon, whose roe, or eggs, is washed and salted to make caviar, has been considered a royal fish since ancient times. In Roman days, it was bedecked with flowers and borne to the emperors' tables in grandeur. A law enacted in the reign of King Edward II made any sturgeon caught in England the property of the king.

Burglars hit 3 businesses

NEW MADRID — Burglars were on the move late Friday night and early Saturday morning in the city when three business firms were entered and thefts of citizen band radios were also reported.

Police said Knight's Department Store, 331 Main St., was entered Friday night or Saturday morning through an unlocked second-story window. Mens' clothing, consisting of one suit, four sports coats, shirts, sweaters and a felt hat, and two suitcases were reported stolen.

A quantity of cigarettes and a small amount of money from two cigarette machines were taken in a break-in Saturday between 2 a.m. and 5:30 a.m. at Rosie's Colonial Restaurant on Highway 61, where a kitchen window was knocked out.

A cigarette machine in the restaurant and one in the bar had been pried open and a juke box in the bar was damaged when an unsuccessful attempt was made to open it.

The L and P Grain office, just west of Highway 61 was broken into and searched, however nothing was found missing. A front door glass had been broken to enter the building.

Three citizen band radios were stolen from vehicles belonging to Sam L. Hunter Jr. that were parked at his home, 951 St. Jack Long, 901 Scott St., reported a citizen band radio was stolen from his car parked in a garage at his home. Both men said the cars were locked.

A soft drink machine outside Hendrick's Grocery on Rt. U was broken into and an unknown amount of money taken.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Oliver

Olivers observe 69th anniversary

GRAY RIDGE — Mr. and Mrs. Will Oliver celebrated their 69th wedding anniversary with an open house in their home Jan. 12.

The open house was planned by a niece, Mrs. Dorothy Maddox.

The Olivers, known to friends as Uncle Will and Aunt Maggie, came to Missouri from Illinois. Mrs. Oliver's family moved in a covered wagon, when she was 5 years old, from Shawneetown, Ill., to make their home between Bloomfield and Essex. She will be 84 Jan. 30. A team of oxen moved Uncle Will's family when he was 7 to a home near Bloomfield. He will be 90 May 12. Both remember crossing the Mississippi River on a barge and recall that it took several days to make the entire trip.

The Olivers met in the Bloomfield area and were married on Jan. 13, 1906, by Justice of the Peace N. E. Waller in Buck's store at Bloomfield.

The weather was coldand rainy the day the couple drove to be married in a borrowed horse-pulled wagon. Their marriage license, brown from age, is inscribed with the words: "Love and Good Clean Living, and of all things have God in your life, are the main ingredients of a successful marriage.

The wedding dinner was at a cafe in Bloomfield, the name of which they cannot remember. Both received their elementary education in schools near Essex. Oliver is a retired farmer, and both he and Mrs. Oliver are members of the Gray Ridge General Baptist Church.

Of eight children, four are living:' Veola Goff of Festus, Willis Oliver of Gray Ridge, Lindell Oliver of Ireland and Clarence Oliver of the home. They also have 22 grandchildren and 19 great-grandchildren.

The serving table was covered with a gold-colored cloth and centered with a decorated cake inscribed: "Uncle Will and Aunt Maggie, 69 years". Golden candles and a crystal punch bowl with red apple punch completed the table setting.

Attending were: Pate Lemons, Willis Oliver and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Jay Rankins, Mrs. Camille Julian, Mr. and Mrs. Bek Maddox, Mrs. Orphia Maddox, Mrs. Vivian Maddox, Lonnie Fulkerson, Zelmer Goins and Mrs. Inez Mitchell and two daughters and grandson of Gray Ridge, Mrs. Christine Hasty of Kennett; Mrs. Bob Lane of Essex; the Rev. Arvil and Mrs. Edmonds and daughter of Dexter; Mr. and and Mrs. Olen Goff of Festus.

Ann Landers

Reader's list helps to deal with people

Dear Ann Landers: Two years ago, I took a short course in Human Relations. Last night I went through some old notebooks and found this "lesson" which has been invaluable to me. I would like to share it with others.--Better For It In Massapequa

The six most important words in the English language: I admit I made a mistake.

The five most important words: You did a good job.

The four most important words: What is your opinion?

The three most important words: If you please.

The two most important words: Thank you.

The one most important word: We.

The least important word: I.

--Anonymous

Dear Mass: Thank you. You did a good job. We appreciate your sharing. (I used EIGHT of the most important words right here--also the LEAST important.)

Dear Ann Landers: This letter is in regard to "Urgent and Waiting," the family whose young relative was diagnosed as having a brain tumor. Though my brain tumor was benign, surgery was necessary because of its location, size and rapid growth.

My neurosrugeon was very skilled and the operation was a complete success. I wás warned that I would probably be blind in one eye, but I was very lucky. My vision in both eyes is nearly perfect.

Now, at age 18, I am in excellent health. The only reminder of that tumor is a thin scar and some pills I must take daily for a thyroid deficiency.

When I first learned of the tumor, I was scared to death, and so was my family, but our faith in God--and a wonderful surgeon--kept us strong.

Thank you, Ann, for telling your readers that "a brain tumor need not be a death sentence." I am living proof and there are thousands more like me.--Alive And Well

Dear A and W: Thank you for the heartening testimonial. I received some letters from readers who had malignant brain tumors removed and made it. So, the word from here is, "Have faith--and a good doctor."

Dear Ann Landers: After 20 years of marriage and six kids, my husband decided he'd rather have a younger woman. We divorced nine months ago and he says he loves the children but he refuses to take them even for one night. (He and the younger woman are living together but not married.)

I want to entertain a male friend of whom I have become very fond, but there is absolutely no privacy around here.

My bedroom is the only possibility. It has a TV, stereo--and bed. Would it be decent, nine months after their father left, to entertain a man in my bedroom?

Does being single and raising children mean I have to give up EVERYTHING?--Cheated

Dear Cheated: If your husband says he loves the kids he'd better start proving it by taking them for weekends (sans girlfriend until they marry if they do)-- and on holidays. This would not only make them feel less abandoned but prevent total estrangement which may prove very painful for him in years to come. It would also provide the relief and periodic freedom to which you are certainly entitled.

Confidential to Miss Know-Nothing: I don't believe his put-downs are legit. Even a clock that isn't working is right twice a day.

Sikeston places second

JACKSON----The Sikeston Bulldog junior varsity basketball team lost to Cape Central in the finals of the Jackson invitational tournament here Saturday night 68-52, giving the Tigers the tournament championship.

Sikeston played without the service of Alonzo Harris for the second straight game due t illness and the absence of the 6-2 forward hurt the Bulldogs efforts.

The Tigers defense limited 6 foot 4 Paul Gilbow to only nine points in the game and that made a big difference also. Gilbow has been scoring in double figures all season.

The tigers jumped to a 17-14 first period lead but the Bulldogs fought back to within one point, 32-31 at the half.

The Bulldogs ran into some foul trouble in the first half which began to take its toll as the Tigers scored at will in the third and fourth periods to wrap up the victory. The Bulldogs' scoring fell off quite a bit in the last half as coach Asa Kinnaman's team scored only 12 points in the third quarter and nine in the fourth.

Kenny Standridge scored 12 points for the Bulldogs. Schurbusch scored 16 for the Tigers.

Host Jackson took third place with a 58-47 victory over Notre Dame.

Jackson outscored Notre Dame 19-9 in the second quarter after a 5-5 tie in the first period. The Bulldogs were never able to catch up in the second half. Roger Lang was high for Jackson with 16 points. Rick Dohonge scored 16 for ND.

Fox pins SHS matmen

ARNOLD----Coach John Heacox's young wrestling team ran into an experienced bunch of Fox wrestler here Saturday night and lost both the junior varsity match and the varsity contest. Fox won the JV match 60-6 and the varsity match 47-6. The loss left Sikeston's record at 5-3.

The Fox team had 22 matches prior to the win over SHS while the Bulldogs had only eight matches and the Fox team was undefeated. Fox is also rated eighth in all the St. Louis area.

"They had many more matches than we did and it was evident Saturday night." said coach Heacox. "They had several squad meets and we have a lot of catching up to do", he said.

Alright fans, I'm beginning to peak in my daily guessing game of H.S. basketball. Of the fifteen scored that we received Friday night I only missed one. Cape Central surprised me by beating Kennett but I hear that it's nearly impossible to defeat the Tigers on their home court these days. I will know better next time. I may have underrated the Tigers a little but but maybe they are Tigers on their home court.

From what I hear Scott Central almost got to Lilbourn. Those Braves sure can surprise people at times.

The conference tournaments start in the next two weeks and then the round up of the regular season and then comes the season that everyone longs for each year---the regional tournaments.

Well, here I go for Monday and Tuesday nights action. Delta vs Oran----This is in the Scott-Mississippi tourney Monday night. I like the Bobcats in a real scoring battle----80-75. Tuesday--Gideon at Holcommb--The Bulldogs look like the winners----65-60.

Bloomfield at Dexter---Wildcat coach Joe Nichols learned his basketball from Bearcat coach Jim Hall and after this game is over coach Hall will have given coach Nichols some more lessons. Dexter 75, Bloomfield 65.

Clarkton at Delta C-7----I pick the Chargers---70-60.

Kennett at Senath-Hornersville----The teams down south can't play with the Indians-----75-60.

North Pemiscot at Hayti-----I like the Mustangs balance--75-65.

Meridian, Ill. at Sikeston----I pick the Bulldogs because of home court only----75-65.

Zalma at Marquand---This will be a real shootout. These two teams played at Zalma in the first game of the season and Zalma scored over 100 points. I believe the Bulldogs will romp and stomp. Marquand players have trouble with their hair getting in their eyes----90-80.

Woodland at College High---Kevin Arand has his boys playing good basketball in his first year at Woodland. If they had some height they could be tough. I pick the Cardinals easy--75-50.

Doniphan at Neelyville---jThe Dons have been scoring a lot of points this season but the Tigers own that territory and will prove it to the Dons----75-70.

Advance at Poplar Bluff----The Mules embarrassed the Hornets at Bloomfield and that should make this an interesting game. Advance hasn't been scoring many points lately. I've noticed some scoring from different people in the last couple of games. It's about the time of the year for the Hornets to start their drive.--I'm going to try Advance one more time----67-60.

Parma at Bernie---Bernie couldn't handle Steve Gibson in the Bernie tournament in November and they probably can't do it now-----70-66.

Puxico at Bell City--- The Indians are up and down but should have little trouble with the down Cubs.

Cooter at Risco---Poor Cooter----90-50.

Lilbourn at Charleston---This is marked as the best matchup on the night. Lilbourn has a scoring machine out of this world. Charleston aint bad but not good enough----80-60.

Sikeston places second

JACKSON---The Sikeston Bulldog junior varsity basketball team lost to Cape Central in the finals of the Jackson invitational tournament here Saturday night 68-52, giving the Tigers the tournament championship.

Sikeston played without the service of Alonzo Harris for the second straight game due t illness and the absence of the 6-2 forward hurt the Bulldogs efforts.

The Tigers defense limited 6 foot 4 Paul Gilbow to only nine points in the game and that made a big difference also. Gilbow has been scoring in double figures all season.

The tigers jumped to a 17-14 first period lead but the Bulldogs fought back to within one point, 32-31 at the half.

The Bulldogs ran into some foul trouble in the first half which began to take its toll as the Tigers scored at will in the third and fourth periods to wrap up the victory. The Bulldogs' scoring fell off quite a bit in the last half as coach Asa Kinnaman's team scored only 12 points in the third quarter and nine in the fourth.

Kenny Standridge scored 12 points for the Bulldogs. Schurbusch scored 16 for the Tigers.

Host Jackson took third place with a 58-47 victory over Notre Dame.

Jackson outscored Notre Dame 19-9 in the second quarter after a 5-5 tie in the first period. The Bulldogs were never able to catch up in the second half. Roger Lang was high for Jackson with 16 points. Rick Dohonge scored 16 for ND.

Miami hosts pro bowl

By WILL GRIMSLEY

MIAMI (AP)-The answers to pro football's problems lie with "reasonable men sitting down and working out sensible settlements reasonably," one of the game's retiring stars suggests.

"We cannot continue to live in discord," added linebacker Willie Lanier of the Kansas City Chiefs who will be pulling on a jersey for the last time in tonight's pro Bowl game at the Orange Bowl.

The game, matching all-star teams of the American and National Conferences, will have a 9 p.m. kickoff.

It will be televised nationally by ABC-TV.

Lanier, 29, a graduate of Morgan State and a defensive titan in the National Football League for eight years, will play with the favored AFC squad, which will feature the quarterbacking of Ken Stabler and Bob Griese, the running of such stars as O.J. Simpson and Larry Csonka and a defense girded by Mean Joe Greene and L.C. Greenwood of Pittsburgh's Super Bowl champions.

With Frank Tarkenton of the Minnesota Vikings begging off because of a sore arm, the NFC squad will have two quarterbacks making their first appearances in the game-Jim Hart of St. Louis and Jim Harris of the Los Angeles Rams.

Lanier is quitting football to take an executive position with a tobacco company and will be stationed in the Washington, D.C. area.

"I don't leave with any regrets or recriminations," the 245-pound middle linebacker said. "It has been a great life. Pro football offers players tremendous opportunities in other fields."

Lanier said he hoped the game would never have to go through a bitter player strike such as the one which hit the game last summer.

Quarterback tops pro draft list

MIAMI (AP)-Steve Bartkowski, a big, strong-throwing quarterback out of the University of California, looms as the hottest commodity in the approaching National Football League draft, and the Baltimore Colts have first grabs.

"We don't feel we need a quarterback, but believe we could use Bartkowski for good trading purposes," said Joe Thomas, Baltimore's general manager, after winning the coin flip for the No. 1 pick over Tex Schramm of the Dallas Cowboys.

The New York Giants, with a 2-12 season record to match that of the Colts for worst in the NFL, would have been in the coin flp, but traded their No. 1 pick to Dallas for quarterback Craig Morton.

"I am in contact with four clubs which are interested in landing a quarterback like Bartkowski," Thomas said. "We are trying to rebuild, to get the Colts back into the playoff status they once enjoyed. We feel we should be able to land two front-line experienced players, at least, for this fine quarterback."

Thomas said the situation was similar to that which existed a few years ago, when he was with the Miami Dolphins and had a chance to pick Mike Phipps, the Purdue quarterback, but actually wanted a top wide receiver. So he traded the choice to Cleveland, and received Paul Warfield in return.

"I hope to have a deal made before the draft," the Baltimore executive said. The draft is scheduled Jan. 28-29 in New York.

Thomas declined to identify the four clubs with whom he is talking, but they are believed to be the Kansas City Chiefs, Washington Redskins, Los Angeles Rams and New York Jets.

The chiefs have an aging quarterback in Len Dawson and owner Lamar Hunt has indicated he is anxious to instill new blood in the Chiefs, to rebuild them into a Super Bowl contender. Earlier, Hunt fired veteran Coach Hank Stram, and he is still seeking a successor.

Washington is plugging along with a pair of old-timers, Sonny Jurgensen and Billy Kilmer, and the Rams, having traded John Hadl to Green Bay, are reportedly not completely satisfied with James Harris and young Ron Jaworski.

The Jets' situation is well known. Broadway Joe Namath hasn't made up his mind whether to continue in the game, and he has advised Phil Iselin, the club's president, that he should sign a young quarterback even if he, Namath, decides to play a couple more years.

Baltimore appears to be satisfied with its present signalcallers, Bert Jones and Marty Domres. The Colts are in the market for a lineman of the caliber of Maryland's Randy White, or a linebacker like Rod Shoate of national champion Oklahoma or little-known Robert Brazile.

"If we are unable to make a deal for Bartkowski before the draft," Thomas said, "I think we would go for White."

White is a 6-foot-4, 255-pounder who received both the Outland and Lombardi trophies as the nation's top college lineman.

Walton changes agents

MILWAUKEE (AP)-If Bill Walton is trying to break his estimated $2 million contract with the Portland Trail Blazers, the celebrated rookie center isn't saying. In fact, Walton's new counsel, Black Panther Party attorney Charles Garry, is denying it.

Walton confirmed Sunday he had severed his relationship with longtime associate Sam Gilbert, who helped the 6-foot-11 former UCLA center negotiate his original National Basketball Association contract, in favor of Garry.

And Gilbert claimed it was because Walton didn't want to play with the Blazers. And he said the only reason Walton returned to the Blazers after suffering with a bone spur above his left ankle, was that he couldn't break the contract.

It was too cold in Portland, Gilbert said Walton had told him, and his feet hurt.

Walton had no faith in the team physician, Gilbert said he was told, and some of the players were getting down on him.

But asked whether the subject of breaking Walton's contract had ever come up, Garry said: "Absolutely not. The contract never came up in any of our discussions."

Garry said he didn't even really know why Walton had hired him. He said Walton told him "he wanted someone he could trust, would look after his own interests and be comfortable with.

"The only thing I've done is read his contract to understand it and familiarize myself with his work, "said Garry.

Walton, a vegetarian and naturalist, said after Portland's 122-108 defeat at Milwaukee Sunday: "Garry is my lawyer. Also a friend of mine." It was Walton's third game following the 18-game absence.

Asked about Gilbert's contentions that he wants to be traded to another club, Walton said, "I deal in the world of reality. I don't know anything about it. I can only deal with what I know."

Asked if he wanted to remain with Portland, he said, "I like to play basketball.

"Basketball is basketball," he said. "I wouldn't come to Milwaukee for my health. I'm here today. I'm going to Kansas City tomorrow.

"You're asking me to comment on society," he said. "You know, I'm trying to get dressed, man."

Walton, toweling his shoulder length red hair, wore a T-shirt which proclaimed, "Be kind to animals. Don't eat them."

Asked about the report, Blazers' Coach Lenny Wilkens said, "We had X rays of him taken. I have no other comment. There have been stories like that all year long. I can't worry about those things.

"I know he's here and I know he's playing," Wilkens said. "That's all I care about."

EDMONTON (AP) — A $21-million stadium for the 1978 Commonwealth Games with 30,000 permanent seats and 15,000 temporary ones have been approved by the city council.

The council approved the stadium, to be located near the 24,000-seat Clarke Stadium, Saturday.

Construction is expected to start this summer with completion scheduled for sometime in 1977, well in advance of the Games.

jackson, miss. (AP) — Mississippi Baptist Hospital's intensive care nursery has received $2,000 from fines levied against players of the New York Giants' National Football League team. The gift was suggested by Jack Gregory, a Giant player whose son spent a year in the nursery after being born with defective lungs. A spokesman said the Giant team voted to donate the money.

Gregory's son, Earl Jackson Gregory III, returns to the hospital for regular checkups. He celebrated his first birthday Aug. 5 by going to his grandparents' home at nearby Pelahatchie.

atlanta)ap) — Lou Hudson, Atlanta's high-scoring perennial All-Star, will undergo surgery Tuesday for removal of calcium deposits in his right elbow, the National Basketball Association club has announced.

Hudson, a 6-foot-5 forward-guard, has played in only 11 games this season for the Hawks, averaging 22 points a game. However, the 30-year-old sharpshooter had not played in two months.

Hudson, who has been an NBA All-Star six times, holds a 23.2 scoring average for nine seasons and was fourth last year in the league with a 25.4 average.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Reserve forward Larry Lewis has quit the Ivy League Champion University of Pennsylvania basketball team to concentrate on his studies. Coach Chuck Daly said Lewis, a senior, "will not be in uniform for the rest of the year."

"We don't feel we need a quarterback, but believe we could use Bartkowski for good trading purposes," said Joe Thomas, Baltimore's general manager, after winning the coin flip for the No. 1 pick over Tex Schramm of the Dallas Cowboys.

The New York Giants, with a 2-12 season record to match that of the Colts for worst in the NFL, would have been in the coin flp, but traded their No. 1 pick to Dallas for quarterback Craig Morton.

"I am in contact with four clubs which are interested in landing a quarterback like Bartkowski," Thomas said. "We are trying to rebuild, to get the Colts back into the playoff status they once enjoyed. We feel we should be able to land two front-line experienced players, at least, for this fine quarterback."

Thomas said the situation was similar to that which existed a few years ago, when he was with the Miami Dolphins and had a chance to pick Mike Phipps, the Purdue quarterback, but actually wanted a top wide receiver. So he traded the choice to Cleveland, and received Paul Warfield in return.

"I hope to have a deal made before the draft," the Baltimore executive said. The draft is scheduled Jan. 28-29 in New York.

Thomas declined to identify the four clubs with whom he is talking, but they are believed to be the Kansas City Chiefs, Washington Redskins, Los Angeles Rams and New York Jets.

The chiefs have an aging quarterback in Len Dawson and owner Lamar Hunt has indicated he is anxious to instill new blood in the Chiefs, to rebuild them into a Super Bowl contender. Earlier, Hunt fired veteran Coach Hank Stram, and he is still seeking a successor.

Washington is plugging along with a pair of old-timers, Sonny Jurgensen and Billy Kilmer, and the Rams, having traded John Hadl to Green Bay, are reportedly not completely satisfied with James Harris and young Ron Jaworski.

The Jets' situation is well known. Broadway Joe Namath hasn't made up his mind whether to continue in the game, and he has advised Phil Iselin, the club's president, that he should sign a young quarterback even if he, Namath, decides to play a couple more years.

Baltimore appears to be satisfied with its present signalcallers, Bert Jones and Marty Domres. The Colts are in the market for a lineman of the caliber of Maryland's Randy White, or a linebacker like Rod Shoate of national champion Oklahoma or little-known Robert Brazile.

"If we are unable to make a deal for Bartkowski before the draft," Thomas said, "I think we would go for White."

White is a 6-foot-4, 255-pounder who received both the Outland and Lombardi trophies as the nation's top college lineman.

Walton changes agents

MILWAUKEE (AP)-If Bill Walton is trying to break his estimated $2 million contract with the Portland Trail Blazers, the celebrated rookie center isn't saying. In fact, Walton's new counsel, Black Panther Party attorney Charles Garry, is denying it.

Walton confirmed Sunday he had severed his relationship with longtime associate Sam Gilbert, who helped the 6-foot-11 former UCLA center negotiate his original National Basketball Association contract, in favor of Garry.

And Gilbert claimed it was because Walton didn't want to play with the Blazers. And he said the only reason Walton returned to the Blazers after suffering with a bone spur above his left ankle, was that he couldn't break the contract.

It was too cold in Portland, Gilbert said Walton had told him, and his feet hurt.

Walton had no faith in the team physician, Gilbert said he was told, and some of the players were getting down on him.

But asked whether the subject of breaking Walton's contract had ever come up, Garry said: "Absolutely not. The contract never came up in any of our discussions."

Garry said he didn't even really know why Walton had hired him. He said Walton told him "he wanted someone he could trust, would look after his own interests and be comfortable with.

"The only thing I've done is read his contract to understand it and familiarize myself with his work, "said Garry.

Walton, a vegetarian and naturalist, said after Portland's 122-108 defeat at Milwaukee Sunday: "Garry is my lawyer. Also a friend of mine." It was Walton's third game following the 18-game absence.

Asked about Gilbert's contentions that he wants to be traded to another club, Walton said, "I deal in the world of reality. I don't know anything about it. I can only deal with what I know."

Asked if he wanted to remain with Portland, he said, "I like to play basketball.

"Basketball is basketball," he said. "I wouldn't come to Milwaukee for my health. I'm here today. I'm going to Kansas City tomorrow.

"You're asking me to comment on society," he said. "You know, I'm trying to get dressed, man."

Walton, toweling his shoulder length red hair, wore a T-shirt which proclaimed, "Be kind to animals. Don't eat them."

Asked about the report, Blazers' Coach Lenny Wilkens said, "We had X rays of him taken. I have no other comment. There have been stories like that all year long. I can't worry about those things.

"I know he's here and I know he's playing," Wilkens said. "That's all I care about."

EDMONTON (AP) — A $21-million stadium for the 1978 Commonwealth Games with 30,000 permanent seats and 15,000 temporary ones have been approved by the city council.

The council approved the stadium, to be located near the 24,000-seat Clarke Stadium, Saturday.

Construction is expected to start this summer with completion scheduled for sometime in 1977, well in advance of the Games.

jackson, miss. (AP) — Mississippi Baptist Hospital's intensive care nursery has received $2,000 from fines levied against players of the New York Giants' National Football League team. The gift was suggested by Jack Gregory, a Giant player whose son spent a year in the nursery after being born with defective lungs. A spokesman said the Giant team voted to donate the money.

Gregory's son, Earl Jackson Gregory III, returns to the hospital for regular checkups. He celebrated his first birthday Aug. 5 by going to his grandparents' home at nearby Pelahatchie.

atlanta)ap) — Lou Hudson, Atlanta's high-scoring perennial All-Star, will undergo surgery Tuesday for removal of calcium deposits in his right elbow, the National Basketball Association club has announced.

Hudson, a 6-foot-5 forward-guard, has played in only 11 games this season for the Hawks, averaging 22 points a game. However, the 30-year-old sharpshooter had not played in two months.

Hudson, who has been an NBA All-Star six times, holds a 23.2 scoring average for nine seasons and was fourth last year in the league with a 25.4 average.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Reserve forward Larry Lewis has quit the Ivy League Champion University of Pennsylvania basketball team to concentrate on his studies. Coach Chuck Daly said Lewis, a senior, "will not be in uniform for the rest of the year."

Checkout clerks have trying job

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — In these days of skyrocketing prices and outraged consumers, Maria Morabito's job as a supermarket checkout clerk provides her with a consummate test of skill and patience.

Like thousands of cash register clerks across the country, 18-year-old Maria must stand for two-hour stretches without a break during her eight-hour shift. During this time, her eyes are glued to the passing parade of groceries and her hands are working in different directions — one sorting the items and the ther punching the cash register keybard.

If she goes too slow, the grocery carts begin to stack up. If she goes too fast, she may make a mistake.

"Many customers have started coming in with hand calculators," she said. "They're ready and waiting when I come up with a total ... some will argue for an hour over two cents."

Maria acknowledged that she is barraged with price complaints, but said she doesn't mind them too much.

"I sort of like it when they come in with their calculators," she said. "It's a challenge and I'm hardly ever wrong ... it gets hectic but it can be fun at times."

An employe of one of Huntington's Tradewell markets, Maria has been behind a register only since last summer. But Dora McLaughlin has been ringing up totals for 32 years.

"I check out an average of abut 200 customers a day," said Miss McLaughlin, who works at an A&P store in Charleston. "I probaby get complaints from about 150 of them."

She said the recent price rises have brought the worst rash of customer complaints in memory.

Austin Kuhn, vice president of the West Virginia Retail Grocers Association and the owner-operator of Austin's grocery at Morgantown, says price complaints have become a way of life with cash register operators.

"It's simple," he said. "They take most of the heat because they are at the end of the line, where the cash is being forked over."

However Kuhn said, few clerks quit bcause of the complaints.

"It's the robberies that makes them quit," he said. "A store'll usually lose one or two after a holdup."

Dr. Lamb

Doctor's warning on Tylenol

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — You had a column stating that patients taking an anti-clotting medicine should not take Tylenol because it would intensify the medication. I am taking Coumadin as prescribed by my doctor and, not having read your column, took Tylenol. It seems that you are right, because I did have blood in my urine.

My doctor said Tylenol was okay to take but to stay away from aspirin. I told him about your article that Tylenol should not be used during anti-clotting medication. He suggested that there had been a misprint in the paper and why didn't I write to the paper for a correction. I checked with another doctor and he too said Tylenol was okay — perhaps my kidneys had a problem, so I ended up having an X ray of my kidneys. The X ray proved my kidneys were okay. So, how can one explain the Tylenol problem? I found that bleeding occurred on three different occasions after using Tylenol and am convinced you are right. Any additional information would be appreciated.

DEAR READER — My column stirred up a hornet's nest, and that is good. NO ONE should take acetaminophen (known as Tylenol, Apamid, Conacetol, Tempra and other trade names) if they are taking anti-clotting medicines, (sometimes called blood thinners) without having the doctor take a blood clotting test. There are so many people taking anti-clotting medicines after a heart attack, or because of clotting problems, or even a stroke, that this point deserves the widest possible public dissemination. The fact that people like yourself can buy acetaminophen medicines without any prescription makes it dangerous for you, in my professional opinion.

You can use these medicines without any danger of hemorrhage if you are not taking an anti-clotting medicine. Tylenol has no effect on normal clotting, but it increases the activity of anti-clotting medicine.

This does not mean that people taking anti-clotting medicines can not take Tylenol or other brands. It means the doctor may need to decrease the dose of anti-clotting medicine if the patient takes Tylenol. You could even take it "occasionally," meaning one or two tablets in a week or two. Beyond that, see your doctor.

One manufacturer acknowledges these facts. The AMA Drug Evaluation 1971 states acetaminophen "potentiates action of oral anticoagulants" (page 181).

Drs. Albert Antlitz and Lawrence Awalt of the University of Maryland reported a study of an anti-clotting medicine, Coumadin and acetaminophen (Tylenol) and found it necessary to decrease the dose of Coumadin from 5.8 to 4.4 mg (over 20 per cent) to prevent the clotting test from becoming prolonged while taking Tylenol. (NOTE TO DOCTORS: reference, Current Therapeutic Research, Vol. 10, October, 1968, page 501).

Some patients respond differently than others, but the studies showed conclusively that acetaminophen under any trade name will increase the action of anti-clotting medicines if acetaminophen is used a week or more. Small doses for two days were not shown to have this effect. So, my advice is for anyone taking anti-clotting medicines and Tylenol for several days or more should have his blood tested. Also, I think a warning should be on the label of acetaminophen medicines.

Today is Monday, January 20th, the 20th day of 1975. There are 345 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

In 1936, King George V of Britain died. The Prince of Wales succeeded to the throne as Edward VIII.

On this date — In 1265, England's Parliament, representing the English counties, met for the first time.

In 1801, John Marshall was appointed U.S. Chief Justice.

In 1887, the U.S. Senate approved the leasing of Pearl Harbor in Hawaii as a naval base.

In 1941, Franklin Roosevelt became the first U.S. President to be inaugurated for a third term.

In 1953, Gen. Dwight Eisenhower took the oath as the 34th U.S. President.

In 1970, the United States and Communist China resumed diplomatic talks in Warsaw after a two-year lapse.

Ten years ago: Lyndon Johnson was inaugurated for his first full term as President and Hubert Humphrey was sworn in as Vice President.

Five years ago: A majority of the nation's major airlines agreed to begin a program aimed at ending smoke pollution from jet airliners by the end of 1972.

One year ago: Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott said he had information that would clear President Nixon of any wrongdoing in some aspects of the Watergate scandal but would not say what it was.

Service center opens

JEFFERSON CITY — George M. Camp, deputy director of the Missouri Department of Social Services, has announced the formal opening of the Cape Girardeau Corrections Service Center for ex-offenders in the Southeast Missouri area.

The nonresidential facility is located at 703 Broadway and is one of six service centers being established throughout the state. Service centers have already been opened in Springfield, Columbia and St. Louis, and two additional centers will soon open in Kansas City and another in St. Louis.

The program, which is the first of its kind in the nation, was developed through funds from Region VII of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration to assist ex-offenders released from the Missouri Division of Corrections who are without any type of supervision or assistance.

Camp stated, "These service centers are an important segment of the ongoing process of offender rehabilitation and improving public safety and will be available to ex-offenders who are returning to their home communities in Southeast Missouri.

"The most crucial time period in determining an inmate's success is often the first few months following his or her return to society. With the services being provided by the centers, we think that their chance for a successful return will be significantly increased."

The service center's overall plans includes the development and implementation of programs to assist in the ex-offender's return to society. The personnel will work closely with institutional coordinators to link the inmates to be released with the community to which they are returning.

The major functions of the centers will be job development and placement assistance for ex-offenders and referring ex-offenders to existing programs and agencies in the community, Camp said.

To support the objectives, the staff will provide educational, vocational, family-marital and personal counseling for ex-offenders as well as for inmates in the community who are on work and study release or on furlough to develop a placement plan, he added.

Additional services will include the development and coordination of education and vocational training, emergency support services and providing information about corrections to family and friends of inmates as well as the general public.

The facility in Cape Girardeau is staffed by a director, four counselors, one-part-time student intern and secretarial support. The director and counselors wil l work closely with ex-offenders, their families and the community to provide this assistance.

The role of the counselor is seen as a vital element of the program, and they will assist ex-ofenders in obtaining employment in their home community, Camp stated.

In addition to volunteer assistance from the community, student assistance will be sought from area universities and colleages.

Larry H. Trickey, who is the director of the Cape Girardeau Service Center, received a bachelor of science degree in psychology from Florida State University at Tallahassee, Fla., and a master's degree in social work from Washington University at St. Louis.

Unemployment allowances are extended

JEFFERSON CITY — Department of Labor and Industrial Relations Director Geoffrey McCarron reminded Missourians Today that domestic workers in private homes, farm workers and government workers may be eligible for unemployment allowances.

McCarron, who heads the state Department of Labor and Industrial Relations, said federal funding through special unemployment assistance provides unemployment benefits for those not eligible for unemployment compensation under any other program.

Some who have been paid wages for insured work (but not sufficient to qualify under the state unemployment insurance program), and some who have exhausted regular unemployment insurance benefits may also be eligible, McCarron said.

"It is important that persons take to the office of the Missouri Division of Employment Security some proof of work and wages paid during the past 52 weeks, and their Social Security number," McCarron said.

"These allowances are intended to provide income support until the unemployed worker fines a job. It's a vital help, and the legislation provides up to 26 weeks of benefits, provided earnings during the preceding 52 weeks were sufficient."

The instant it happened

THE BEGINNING

The Rebels were on the move. After a year and a half of defensive fighting Gen. Robert E. Lee has moved his forces northsward in a grant plan to "shift the burden of occupation from Confederate to Federal soil," a plan that ultimately would take him as far north as Gettysburg.

And so in September of 1862 Lee and his generals are confident. On his way to join his commander after another smashing success at Harper's Ferry, Md., Lee's chief subordinate, Stonewall Jackson, pauses to let his men relax near a peaceful white church by a river called the Antietam. He does not expect a counterattack. It comes with withering fury from troops under "Fighting Joe" Hooker who rake Jackson's men with cannister shot.

As the smoke of battle lifts, temporarily, an ungainly wagon draped in black lumbers onto the blood-drenched field. At the reins is a slight man in a broadcloth suit and linen duster, attire as strange among the blue-clad troops as was the odd vehicle, which Hooker's men have laughingly dubbed the "What-is-it" wagon. The driver is Mathew B. Brady, known among the rich and titled of two continents, whose portraits line his New York galleries, as the foremost practitioner of the infant art of photography.

Quickly now, even as Jackson's men regroup to fight again, even before the Confederate dead are recovered, Brady and his assistants, James and Alexander Gardner, haul out a cumbersome contraption, a camera, along with several delicate glass plates. The plates have been coated, in the field, in total darkness, with a chemical mixture, then fixed, at precisely 60 degrees fahrenheit," to just the right degree of stickiness' in a bath of nitrate of silver. Brady and his men expose the plates to the sunlit carnage. Before the plates fog over they rush them back to the wagon for developing — and back to an awed civilian populace for viewing.

The world gets a new insight into the horror and numbing fatigue of men in battle. Says Oliver Wendell Holmes: "Let him who wishes to know what war is look at these illustrations."

The CIA and citizen gossips

By Tom Tiede

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — During the latter part of the 1960s, when a worried Lyndon Johnson was enlisting the aid of the FBI and CIA to probe domestic anti-establishment thought, I wrote a story that caught the eyes of the on-highs.

The article concerned the American Nazi Party. In it I told of the kinds of citizens attracted to the party, and mentioned casually of meeting two young graduates of The Citadel who were touring and complimenting the ANP headquarters.

Shortly after publication, I received a call from a chap identifying himself as an agent for the Army's Criminal Investigations Division (CID), who wanted to know more about The Citadel soldiers. I said any more than had been published was privileged information, that I was surprised he'd think otherwise, but he persevered. We agreed to meet in a motel near the Kennedy Space Center in Florida, in a few days.

Before the meeting, I called the CID to verify the investigator's credentials. As I suspected, nobody by the name given was on the rolls. He wouldn't be FBI, said an Army friend, because they glory in proper identification; "He's probably CIA — they hide behind many badges."

I agreed he was CIA. Even back then, the agency's "Domestic Contact Service" was an ill-kept secret. I was younger, less experienced, but not completely simple. When the agent arrived in my room, he said the "Army" was interested in finding The Citadel soldiers because "we don't think they should be messing around with Nazis." He had a Citadel yearbook and asked if I would select the proper photos.

Well, had it been Ulysses Grant, not some bumbly spook, asking for such patriotism, I'd have declined. My job as a journalist is to observe, not to spy. As I recall I looked over the yearbook, gave descriptions of the soldiers entirely different from actuality, and concluded I could not associate any of the pictures with the culprits.

The memory of that occasion returns now, with new charges of CIA domestic surveillance, because I think I did right in brushing off the agent and because there may be a greater lesson in the morality. If the charges of widespread intra-national CIA spying are true, it must be assumed they have been aided and abetted by citizens such as you and I. More than assumption, actually, it is a fact the CIA, with some 12 to 15 domestic bureaus, relies on ordinary citizens for some intelligence information. Mostly, the old Domestic Contact Service (now called "Foreign Resources") asks citizens going abroad to keep their eyes and ears open. Supposedly, though — witness the recent revelations — the agency has its at-home finks as well.

No doubt the agents acquire some informers by offering cash or the rhetoric of national duty. Others perhaps do not have to be coaxed at all, since Americans have a disturbing proclivity to gossip; many agencies besides the CIA have found that community wagglers are all too cooperative, if not always accurate, and woe betide the fellow who applies for a security job who has pinched a neighbor's wife or neglected to return a borrowed mower until after the first snow.

The truth of the matter, then, is far more important than whether the CIA committed illegalities; it's whether Americans will become disgusted enough with such dangers to do something about it themselves: mainly, shut up. Doubtless thousands of Americans, myself included I suppose, have had the opportunity to blow the whistle on domestic CIA snoops. We haven't, to now, to our shame. Perhaps the present controversy will convince us otherwise in the future.

This isn't to say that the CIA should expect no citizen aid. I recall another personal experience when I was inexplicably detained (45 minutes) by Communist police at an East Berlin railroad exit, and later questioned about it by the CIA. Had I had any good information then, I would have divulged it — if only to help save others from similar detentions. My belief is that this kind of cooperation is humanistic and proper; but there can be no overriding reason why any of us should be talked into, or bought into, blabbing on one another.

Dexter man glad to offer services

POPLAR BLUFF — Ben D. Cowan Sr. of Dexter isn't philosophical about his more than 5,500 hours of voluntary service at the Veterans Administration Hospital. He's just happy to be able tohelp out.

Cowan retired from Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. in 1954, and he and a small group of other Dexter men started offering their services to the hospital in 1960.

"We don't do it just for the fun of it. We feel we're getting something done," the 85-year-old resident of 232 S.Elm St., Dexter, said. "We do the work the nurses and orderlies would have to do if we weren't here."

Among the duties the volunteers perform are transfering wheelchair patients to various parts of the building and delivering messages to the offices, speciments to the laboratory and books to the library.

"It gives the nurses and orderlies more time to take care of the patients," Cowan said.

During an average 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. day, Cowan and the other volunteers will perform from 160 to 330 "missions." Cowan said that one day when he and only one other volunteer were working, a meter he put on his leg measured eight miles of travel up and down halls of the hospital. That was an unusual day, he said, because they usually have more than two men working.

Cowan goes to the hospital on Wednesdays and Fridays and, in his 15 years of voluntary service, has logged about 50,000 miles of travel between Dexter and the hospital.

"I do have a cap to wear," Cowan said, referring to the Voluntary Service caps men wear while working at the hospital. "But it makes my head itch, so I leave it at home."

Since he and Cecil Day, another Dexter volunteer, started the work, Cowan said he has seen many people come and go, and, "Around here there's something different every day.

"That fifth floor is the smokinest outfit," he said, adding that on some days he gets from 30 to 40 packs of cigarettes for them at the canteen.

Abstaining from smoking and drinking and getting plenty of exercise are the reasons for his good health, he said. When he was younger and during his service in World War I, Cowan said he always "ran with a bunch" that smoked and drank, but he just told them he didn't like it and didn't want it.

"I believe that when we get old, we're better off to stay active. My wife says I have ants in my pants," he said with a chuckle. When he doesn't have a newspaper or some mail to read at home, he putters around the house or goes downtown.

Talking about his 43 years with the phone company, Cowan said, "I was just a general flunky." He was in charge of seeing that things got done by the Dexter, Bloomfield and Essex maintenance crews.

Cowan's 40-year career as a telephone employe took him to many towns, but he said, "When I got to Dexter, I liked it so much I wanted to stay. They keep trying to move me, but they finally left me alone."

Working for the phone company gave Cowan an excellent way to find good quail hunting spots. Quail hunting and golf were Cowan's sports before he decided he had better slow down just a little.

"I've got a record in quail hunting that I wouldn't tell anyone. They'd think I was telling them a big one," he said of the number of birds he got on one hunting trip. And he didn't tell, either.

"I wouldn't give a dime for a registered bird dog," he said, relating how he used to raise "plain old country bird dogs." He trained the dogs and sold them. They paid for all of his hunting equipment, he said, adding that he once had 24 dogs at the same time.

His quail hunting days are past; however, but despite a heart attack he suffered in 1973, Cowan's volunteer service at the VA hospital continues.

"I figure I've got a lot to be thankful for. You see so many people around here that give you a different outlook. Some of them are very young," he said.

None of them, however, is any younger at heart than Cowan. But he isn't about to get profound about man's mission on earth or the fulfillment he and his partners get from the work they are doing.

"We're helping out a little and that's why we come over here," he said.

Tips given to help avoid mail order pitfalls

COLUMBIA — Millions of consumers have found the advantages of shopping by mail. Bad weather and crowds can be avoided. You may relax, shopping at leisure, and you often can gain more information from catalogs than an ill-informed or busy sales person can give you, says Mrs. Karen Stein, University of Missouri-Columbia family economics specialist.

Others, however, have voiced complaints, such as getting billed for merchandise not ordered, having to wait too long or receiving merchandise that is not what the advertisement said it would be, she says.

If you feel catalogs have used deceptive advertising, you should report it to the Federal Trade Commission field office — in Kansas City, for Missourians.

Mrs. Stein, however, says most mail-order pitfalls can be avoided: Check the company's reliability rating with the Better Busines Bureau and its policy on guarantees and returns.

Compare prices in catalogs with the same item in retail stores for several reasons. Check, if in doubt, about the features of merchandise, or to see if the "our price" is as reduced from the "retail price" as the ad claims.

The "retail price" may refer to the manufacturer's suggested retail price, and a few retail stores go by those suggestions.

Mrs. Stein says, "Fill order blanks out completely and legibly. Keep a record of what and when you ordered.

Library obtains movies

JACKSON — Riverside Regional Library has obtained 10 new 16-millimeter movies for circulation in its three-county area of Cape Girardeau, Scott and Perry counties.

Housed at the library's central center in Jackson, the films may be borrowed through any of the five service centers at Altenburg, Perryville, Illmo, Benton and Morley or by requesting them direct from the central center. Patrons of Sikeston Public Library may request the films there.

Some of the film subjects are: Nova Scotia, Montreal, northern Manitoba, British Columbia, the Northwest Territories, Kootenay Valley in the Canada Rockies, Lake Winnipeg and Newfoundland.

As is the case with all of the movies in Riverside Regional Library's film library, these may be borrowed by church groups, civic organizations, sports clubs, study clubs, etc.

Useful Tail

The beaver, which is descended from an 800-pound prehistoric rodent, resembles a groundhog, except that its tail, instead of being bushy, is flat and covered with horny plates that look like scales. This appendage is used primarily as a rudder but also serves as a mat to sit upon while grooming, as a prop to lean against while felling trees, and as a signal club with which to strike the surface of the water and warn other beavers of danger.

Service center opens

JEFFERSON CITY — George M. Camp, deputy director of the Missouri Department of Social Services, has announced the formal opening of the Cape Girardeau Corrections Service Center for ex-offenders in the Southeast Missouri area.

The nonresidential facility is located at 703 Broadway and is one of six service centers being established throughout the state. Service centers have already been opened in Springfield, Columbia and St. Louis, and two additional centers will soon open in Kansas City and another in St. Louis.

The program, which is the first of its kind in the nation, was developed through funds from Region VII of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration to assist ex-offenders released from the Missouri Division of Corrections who are without any type of supervision or assistance.

Camp stated, "These service centers are an important segment of the ongoing process of offender rehabilitation and improving public safety and will be available to ex-offenders who are returning to their home communities in Southeast Missouri.

"The most crucial time period in determining an inmate's success is often the first few months following his or her return to society. With the services being provided by the centers, we think that their chance for a successful return will be significantly increased."

The service center's overall plans includes the development and implementation of programs to assist in the ex-offender's return to society. The personnel will work closely with institutional coordinators to link the inmates to be released with the community to which they are returning.

The major functions of the centers will be job development and placement assistance for ex-offenders and referring ex-offenders to existing programs and agencies in the community, Camp said.

To support the objectives, the staff will provide educational, vocational, family-marital and personal counseling for ex-offenders as well as for inmates in the community who are on work and study release or on furlough to develop a placement plan, he added.

Additional services will include the development and coordination of education and vocational training, emergency support services and providing information about corrections to family and friends of inmates as well as the general public.

The facility in Cape Girardeau is staffed by a director, four counselors, one-part-time student intern and secretarial support. The director and counselors wil l work closely with ex-offenders, their families and the community to provide this assistance.

The role of the counselor is seen as a vital element of the program, and they will assist ex-ofenders in obtaining employment in their home community, Camp stated.

In addition to volunteer assistance from the community, student assistance will be sought from area universities and colleagues.

Larry H. Trickey, who is the director of the Cape Girardeau Service Center, received a bachelor of science degree in psychology from Florida State University at Tallahassee, Fla., and a master's degree in social work from Washington University at St. Louis.

Unemployment allowances are extended

JEFFERSON CITY — Department of Labor and Industrial Relations Director Geoffrey McCarron reminded Missourians Today that domestic workers in private homes, farm workers and government workers may be eligible for unemployment allowances.

McCarron, who heads the state Department of Labor and Industrial Relations, said federal funding through special unemployment assistance provides unemployment benefits for those not eligible for unemployment compensation under any other program.

Some who have been paid wages for insured work (but not sufficient to qualify under the state unemployment insurance program), and some who have exhausted regular unemployment insurance benefits may also be eligible, McCarron said.

"It is important that persons take to the office of the Missouri Division of Employment Security some proof of work and wages paid during the past 52 weeks, and their Social Security number," McCarron said.

"These allowances are intended to provide income support until the unemployed worker fines a job. It's a vital help, and the legislation provides up to 26 weeks of benefits, provided earnings during the preceding 52 weeks were sufficient."

The instant it happened

THE BEGINNING

The Rebels were on the move. After a year and a half of defensive fighting Gen. Robert E. Lee has moved his forces northsward in a grant plan to "shift the burden of occupation from Confederate to Federal soil," a plan that ultimately would take him as far north as Gettysburg.

And so in September of 1862 Lee and his generals are confident. On his way to join his commander after another smashing success at Harper's Ferry, Md., Lee's chief subordinate, Stonewall Jackson, pauses to let his men relax near a peaceful white church by a river called the Antietam. He does not expect a counterattack. It comes with withering fury from troops under "Fighting Joe" Hooker who rake Jackson's men with cannister shot.

As the smoke of battle lifts, temporarily, an ungainly wagon draped in black lumbers onto the blood-drenched field. At the reins is a slight man in a broadcloth suit and linen duster, attire as strange among the blue-clad troops as was the odd vehicle, which Hooker's men have laughingly dubbed the "What-is-it" wagon. The driver is Mathew B. Brady, known among the rich and titled of two continents, whose portraits line his New York galleries, as the foremost practitioner of the infant art of photography.

Quickly now, even as Jackson's men regroup to fight again, even before the Confederate dead are recovered, Brady and his assistants, James and Alexander Gardner, haul out a cumbersome contraption, a camera, along with several delicate glass plates. The plates have been coated, in the field, in total darkness, with a chemical mixture, then fixed, at precisely 60 degrees fahrenheit," to just the right degree of stickiness' in a bath of nitrate of silver. Brady and his men expose the plates to the sunlit carnage. Before the plates fog over they rush them back to the wagon for developing — and back to an awed civilian populace for viewing.

The world gets a new insight into the horror and numbing fatigue of men in battle. Says Oliver Wendell Holmes: "Let him who wishes to know what war is look at these illustrations."

The CIA and citizen gossips

By Tom Tiede

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — During the latter part of the 1960s, when a worried Lyndon Johnson was enlisting the aid of the FBI and CIA to probe domestic anti-establishment thought, I wrote a story that caught the eyes of the on-highs.

The article concerned the American Nazi Party. In it I told of the kinds of citizens attracted to the party, and mentioned casually of meeting two young graduates of The Citadel who were touring and complimenting the ANP headquarters.

Shortly after publication, I received a call from a chap identifying himself as an agent for the Army's Criminal Investigations Division (CID), who wanted to know more about The Citadel soldiers. I said any more than had been published was privileged information, that I was surprised he'd think otherwise, but he persevered. We agreed to meet in a motel near the Kennedy Space Center in Florida, in a few days.

Before the meeting, I called the CID to verify the investigator's credentials. As I suspected, nobody by the name given was on the rolls. He wouldn't be FBI, said an Army friend, because they glory in proper identification; "He's probably CIA — they hide behind many badges."

I agreed he was CIA. Even back then, the agency's "Domestic Contact Service" was an ill-kept secret. I was younger, less experienced, but not completely simple. When the agent arrived in my room, he said the "Army" was interested in finding The Citadel soldiers because "we don't think they should be messing around with Nazis." He had a Citadel yearbook and asked if I would select the proper photos.

Well, had it been Ulysses Grant, not some bumbly spook, asking for such patriotism, I'd have declined. My job as a journalist is to observe, not to spy. As I recall I looked over the yearbook. gave descriptions of the soldiers entirely different from actuality, and concluded I could not associate any of the pictures with the culprits.

The memory of that occasion returns now, with new charges of CIA domestic surveillance, because I think I did right in brushing off the agent and because there may be a greater lesson in the morality. If the charges of widespread intra-national CIA spying are true, it must be assumed they have been aided and abetted by citizens such as you and I. More than assumption, actually, it is a fact the CIA, with some 12 to 15 domestic bureaus, relies on ordinary citizens for some intelligence information. Mostly, the old Domestic Contact Service (now called "Foreign Resources") asks citizens going abroad to keep their eyes and ears open. Supposedly, though — witness the recent revelations — the agency has its at-home finks as well.

No doubt the agents acquire some informers by offering cash or the rhetoric of national duty. Others perhaps do not have to be coaxed at all, since Americans have a disturbing proclivity to gossip; many agencies besides the CIA have found that community wagglers are all too cooperative, if not always accurate, and woe betide the fellow who applies for a security job who has pinched a neighbor's wife or neglected to return a borrowed mower until after the first snow.

The truth of the matter, then, is far more important than whether the CIA committed illegalities; it's whether Americans will become disgusted enough with such dangers to do something about it themselves: mainly, shut up. Doubtless thousands of Americans, myself included I suppose, have had the opportunity to blow the whistle on domestic CIA snoops. We haven't, to now, to our shame. Perhaps the present controversy will convince us otherwise in the future.

This isn't to say that the CIA should expect no citizen aid. I recall another personal experience when I was inexplicably detained (45 minutes) by Communist police at an East Berlin railroad exit, and later questioned about it by the CIA. Had I had any good information then, I would have divulged it — if only to help save others from similar detentions. My belief is that this kind of cooperation is humanistic and proper; but there can be no overriding reason why any of us should be talked into, or bought into, blabbing on one another.

Dexter man glad to offer services

POPLAR BLUFF — Ben D. Cowan Sr. of Dexter isn't philosophical about his more than 5,500 hours of voluntary service at the Veterans Administration Hospital. He's just happy to be able tohelp out.

Cowan retired from Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. in 1954, and he and a small group of other Dexter men started offering their services to the hospital in 1960.

"We don't do it just for the fun of it. We feel we're getting something done," the 85-year-old resident of 232 S.Elm St., Dexter, said. "We do the work the nurses and orderlies would have to do if we weren't here."

Among the duties the volunteers perform are transfering wheelchair patients to various parts of the building and delivering messages to the offices, speciments to the laboratory and books to the library.

"It gives the nurses and orderlies more time to take care of the patients," Cowan said.

During an average 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. day, Cowan and the other volunteers will perform from 160 to 330 "missions." Cowan said that one day when he and only one other volunteer were working, a meter he put on his leg measured eight miles of travel up and down halls of the hospital. That was an unusual day, he said, because they usually have more than two men working.

Cowan goes to the hospital on Wednesdays and Fridays and, in his 15 years of voluntary service, has logged about 50,600 miles of travel between Dexter and the hospital.

tween districts and is expected to face opposition since under the proposed change, some districts would have their aid reduced.

In the Senate, the Ways and Means Committee will consider a proposed constitutional amendment that would revise the limitations for voter approval of a tax levy increase to support local schools.

Prompted by the failure of a number of increases to gain approval in the past, the amendment, sponsored by Sen. Jack Gant, D-Independence, would permit a majority of voters to boost the levy to any amount for a one-year period. Currently, a two-thirds vote is needed to increase most school district levies to more than $3.75 per $100 assessed valuation.

Extension of the half-cent transportation sales tax, which expires at the end of the year, will be considered by the Senate Municipal Corporations Committee. In addition to giving the tax, which has supported mass transit in both St. Louis and Kansas City, a two-year extension, the proposal would also remove the limitation that one-third of the revenues must be used for capital improvements.

Prompted by the failure of a number of increases to gain approval in the past, the amendment, sponsored by Sen. Jack Gant, D-Independence, would permit a majority of voters to boost the levy to any amount for a one-year period. Currently, a two-thirds vote is needed to increase most school district levies to more than $3.75 per $100 assessed valuation.

Extension of the half-cent transportation sales tax, which expires at the end of the year, will be considered by the Senate Municipal Corporations Committee. In addition to giving the tax, which has supported mass transit in both St. Louis and Kansas City, a two-year extension, the proposal would also remove the limitation that one-third of the revenues must be used for capital improvements.

Board members attend meeting

Representatives from Sikeston and East Prairie school boards attended the annual Missouri School Boards Association and the School Administrators joint meeting held Jan. 12-14 in Columbia.

Attending were superintendent Sam Harbin and board members David Bailey and Dr. Max Heeb of the Sikeston R-6 District and board President Donald Dick, vice president Clayton Allstun and superintendent Gerald McElrath of the East Prairie R-2 District.

Theme of the convention was "education, the child and society,".

Speakers were Byron Hansford, executive Secretaryk, Council of Cief School Officers, Washington D. C. Robert MedCalf, superintendent of schools of Kansas City; and Phillip Swain, president of the National School Boards Association.

Topics of discussion included, school board-staff relationships, management of school monies, inflation and the cost of education, politics of education, current curriculum needs, provision of education in declining enrollment, and the work of school attorneys.

Antimacassar was the name given to the protective covering thrown over the back of a chair or the head of a sofa, named after Macassar, a hair oil in general use in the 19th century.

Open house set

PUXICO — The Mingo Job Corps Center, located near Puxico, will hold an open house Feb. 2 as part of a national celebration of the 10th anniversary of the Job Corps program.

Center director James M Banks announced that the public is invited to visit the center from 1 to 3:30 p.m., and will have an opportunity to see how tax money is spent to conduct a manpower training program to help young men and women, aged 16 to 21, become more responsible, employable and productive citizens.

The first Job Corps center in the nation opened in Harpers Ferry, Md., in February 1965. In the following 10 years, more than 500,000 youth have been served through Job Corps programs. They receive education, vocational training, work experience, avocational activities, health care and counseling as part of their training and preparation for employment.

The Jobs Corps currently has about 20,000 enrollees participating in programs at 60 Jobs Corps centers.

During the past two fiscal years, a follow-up of those who have completed training shows that there has been a placement rate above 90 per cent.

The Mingo Job Corps Center opened in October 1965. Since that time it has served 2,547 young people.

Soft drink machines broken into

LILBOURN — Three soft drink machines were broken open sometime after 4 a.m. Saturday, and an estimated $7 or $8 was stolen from each.

Marshal Ed Martin said the machines appeared to have been pried open with a bar. The machines were located outside Mc Clarty's Supermarket on Route D and Suds-n-Duds Coin Laundry and Rhodes Grocery on Main Street.
